New Anti-Saloon League
Wicked Russia, Again
We Get Used to Things
What Is India to Us?

By Arthur Brisbane

SOME "BIG MEN" among the drys, observing the rush to wetness, think something must be done to offset the big wet names that have come out against prohibition. It worries them to see the Republican and Democratic candidates for governor, both wet in New Jersey. Thomas A. Edison, Gifford Pinchot and William Gibbs McAdoo are among those that will protect prohibition from its enemies.

The "big ones" are said to feel that the Anti-Saloon League and the churches are no longer equal to the task of keeping the dry amendment in the Constitution.

That is a mistaken notion. There is more prohibition power in the Baptist, Methodist and Presbyterian churches and Sunday schools than in all the big names in the country. Separate prohibition from religion and it will be as helpless as a small child lost in a great city.

Britain discovers that Russia employs slave or convict labor, and is shocked, now that Russia undersells Manchester. Russia replies: "Well, you pay your workers just enough to keep alive and go on working. What is the difference?"

The latest news affects cotton growers. Russia has sold, at Liverpool, 163,000 small bales of cotton, from Turkestan, at $3 a bale below our cheap price.

There may be something in the suggestion of a distinguished British economist that Britain and America lend Russia money, thus making it unnecessary for her to dump goods at any price, to continue her industrial plan.

The human mind soon becomes accustomed to whatever happens often. Once torture of witnesses in court and torturing to death of criminals attracted little attention. Now, we scarcely look up when airplanes pass, even the sight of a giant dirigible is only mildly exciting.

A courageous man starts for the North Pole, planning to travel under ice, perhaps 100 feet thick, in his submarine, and we say, "Indeed, so interesting." But in history such feats take their proper places in the story in men's progress from the cave and from the bow and arrow toward civilization.

New York gentlemen, including professional "enemies of England," give a dinner as a long distance testimonial to Gandhi, who "listens in."

How? If the Hindus and Mohammedans in India cannot stop fighting and murdering each other, must we put Uncle Sam's finger in the door jamb?

There are more than three hundred millions in India, fewer than forty millions in the British islands. India can be free, when she decides to gain her freedom as our ancestors got theirs. One man at the dinner praised Gandhi because "he would sacrifice his nation's hope of independence, rather than commit one act of violence."

Must we go over and commit the acts of violence for him?

Why not make it a rule to let other nations attend to their business and wars. Providence knows what is best for all and can interfere, if it chooses. Since divine wisdom refrains from meddling, let us, also, refrain.

Mr. Coolidge, who thinks deeply, quotes Henry Ward Beecher in a statement that our system of government and business is a failure. When Beecher was told that Christianity had failed he replied "it has never been tried."

Mr. Coolidge observes that the Sermon on the Mount is neglected even after 2000 years of preaching. Our social and religious systems are sound, but we human beings are imperfect.

We are also dull. We have millions idle money and capacity for production unlimited, and we do not know what to do with the money, storing it in piles of gold.

Tomorrow this government could raise ten billions. More than seven billions were offered Mr. Mellon a few days ago, when he asked for eight hundred million dollars, paying only 3⅛ per cent interest.

We have it, but do not know how to use it, all of our intelligence being trained in accumulation, none in distribution.

Pope Pius maintains his firm stand, in the face of hostile government action. After closing all Catholic societies, the

LOWELL CRITICIZES SCHOOLS

EDUCATION RETARDED, HE SAYS

Head of Harvard Complains of the Modern Tendency to Prolong Infancy

Exeter, N. H., June 6 (INS)—Modern educational methods in the United States, from kindergarten to college, were criticized this afternoon by President A. Lawrence Lowell of Harvard University, who declared that "one of the notable tendencies of American education is that of prolonged infancy."

Before a distinguished gathering of noted educators, prominent business men and professional men and women, who joined with more than 2000 graduates from all parts of the country to commemorate the 150th anniversary of the founding of Exeter Academy, President Lowell remarked that the methods in use today were perhaps "a revulsion from the Puritan habit of trying to force children to behave like adults."

EDUCATION RETARDED

"The child should not act like a babe, nor the grown man like a boy," said the Harvard president. "Yet in our education there seems to be a retardation that begins in the earliest years and runs right through.

"Kindergarten methods, which are appropriate to the age of 3 or 4, are often used at 5 or 6. In one of our cities children are not admitted to the public schools until 6; and many, if not most, of

New York, June 6—James A. Stillman's last gesture before sailing for Europe today on the White Star liner Olympic was to establish a $3,000,000 trust fund for his four children.

While his vivacious former wife, Anne, was honeymooning with her youthful new husband, Fowler McCormick, an attorney was drawing up the document under which the four Stillman children will receive $750,000 each.

NO CASH FOR MRS. STILLMAN.

The former Mrs. Stillman will not receive a single penny under the agreement, but it was pointed out today that her marriage to young McCormick, grandson of Cyrus McCormick, on one side, and John D. Rockefeller on the other, has eliminated the necessity for financial consideration.

There is already a $10,000,000 trust fund in favor of the four Stillman children. That was established by their paternal grandfather, James Stillman, and their father is the trustee.

The secret divorce obtained by Mrs. Stillman, her sudden remarriage, the establishment of the trust fund and the sailing of Stillman for Europe comprise an amazing new chapter in the most sensational divorce story in the annals of American wealth and society.

Mrs. Stillman, who is 52, was mar-

GILLETTE SUES FOR $75,000

The Gillette Safety Razor Co. today brought suit in Sufolk superior court for $75,000 against John Abbott, Albert E. Gladwin and the Old Colony Trust Co., executors of the estate of the late William E. Nickerson of Boston, to recover from the estate, $97,482.05, alleged to have been paid Nickerson by mistake.

The suit alleges that Nickerson entered into a contract with the Gillette Co., to run for two years under which he was to be paid $12,000 a year, and a royalty of one half a cent on all razor blades made and sold by the Gillette Co. anywhere except in Canada for his services as inventor and as consulting mechanical engineer.

The Gillette Co. says that Nickerson was paid a bonus of $97,482.05 on 19,496,411 dozen razor blades.

The company says it discovered that these blades had not been sold within the meaning of the contract, but were on hand with the company on January 1, 1929, at the expiration of the contract. The company says the defendants refuse to pay back the money or arbitrate the claim.

HATHAWAY IS IN WITNESS HUNT

Newport, R. I., June 6—Prosecution and defense attorneys are today engaged in final preparations for the opening of the trial here on Monday of Elliott R. Hathaway, charged with the murder of Verna Russell.

Activities of the defense staff were devoted largely to questioning friends of the slain student nurse. It was learned this quizzing was devoted to inquiries regarding the dead girl's character, with particular reference to indulgence in liquor.

It was also learned the investigators were interested in ascertaining the condition of the girl's heart, prior to her death. While it is known this trouble was only of a minor nature, the interest of the defense on the point has added credence to the story of Hathaway's proposed defense.

The actions of the government officials have been confined to the summoning of witnesses. These include Joseph P. Mave of New Boston rd., Fall River, who is expected to tell in testimony of the sale of a pint of gin to Hathaway and Vernon Galvin after midnight on March 24.

The prosecuting officials are also acquainted with the person who sold Hathaway a pint of liquor early in the evening but they are withholding the name closely.

Peggy Kehoe, former sweetheart of young Hathaway, is also expected to be a witness, although she has not yet been summoned.

Green Hurls Lie at Wage Cut Reports

Washington, June 6 (AP)—President Green of the American Federation of Labor said today rumors reaching him that the federation would agree to a 10 per cent reduction were "positively untrue."

"I don't understand how such a rumor could have been inspired," Greene said. "There is no justification for it whatsoever. Not only has the federation not consented to any lowering of the wage scale, but it is not sympathetically inclined toward such a move."

'WAMPAS BABY' GIMBEL'S BRIDE

Philadelphia, June 6 (AP)—Sally Phipps, 19, well-known two years ago as the "Wampas Baby" motion picture actress, and Benedict Gimbel, Jr., member of the family operating department stores here and in New York, were on their honeymoon today.

Providence, June 6 (AP)—"Transcendental bootleg" was the description applied today by Reymond G. Bressler, president of Rhode Island State College, at Kingston, to some of the advice given to young people urging them "not to let their lives consist of striving for fame and money."

'WORLD WITH US,' PONTIFF DECLARES IN SPEECH

Tells the Fascist Organization of Messages and Letters From Many Nations

Vatican City, June 6—Pope Pius declared: "We are fighting a battle for liberty of conscience," during an address today to the Fascist Welfare Organization of Milan now visiting Rome.

"This battle," the Pope continued, "is to do good to our own souls and to those of others. All this is for us a recompense for the tribulations and sadnesses of recent days.

"Everyone," he said, "is with us. There has come a magnificent deluge of letters and telegrams with filial expressions of gratitude. Sympathy for us is keen even in the most distant countries."

There is another consolation, too, he told the Fascists, in that his present troubles have come to him from men, but consolation comes from God.

"We must remember," he said, "that some troubles in life come by God's permission. God wishes good, but sometimes he permits the bad."

RELATIONS SUSPENDED.

Diplomatic relations between the Vatican and the Italian government were virtually suspended today, following refusal of the Papal Secretary of State to receive the Italian ambassador.

Further dealings between the Holy See and the Fascist regime are unlikely until Premier Mussolini adopts a different policy, according to a high Vatican official, who pointed out that Pope Pius deeply resents the failure of the premier to reply to his notes of protest.

POPE STANDS FIRM

The present negotiations all are being conducted unofficially by non-diplomatic agents, with the Pope standing firm on his official position and dignity, declaring that he will not surrender a particle of his rights under the Lateran treaty.

Meanwhile, new efforts to heal the church-state breach were fruitless despite what was interpreted as a compromise proposal from Mussolini which was spurned by the pontiff. This constituted an offer from the premier to permit reopening of Catholic clubs for women and girls. The offer was regarded as the first definite result of secret conversations between Marchese Pacelli, papal emissary, and Mussolini.

In his reply, the Pope made it clear that all or none of the re-

REWARD RAISED FOR RETURN OF JEWELS

Insurance Detective Duped; Racket So Lucrative Thieves Make Slip

By THE MASKED REPORTER

(Copyright, 1931, by the Boston Evening American. All Rights Reserved)

The stolen jewelry racket in Boston is so lucrative that instances have been known of extra stones being included unwittingly when stuff was turned back for rewards.

A striking example of the carelessness with which the thieves handle stolen jewelry is the incident of the return of $69,000 worth of ring mountings stolen in another city.

The jewelry was in a salesman's sample case, and the seizure was so clean that detectives working for the insurance company which "covered" it could get no trace of the thief.

It seems, according to my information, that the case was "lifted" by a member of the Boston gang and rushed to this city.

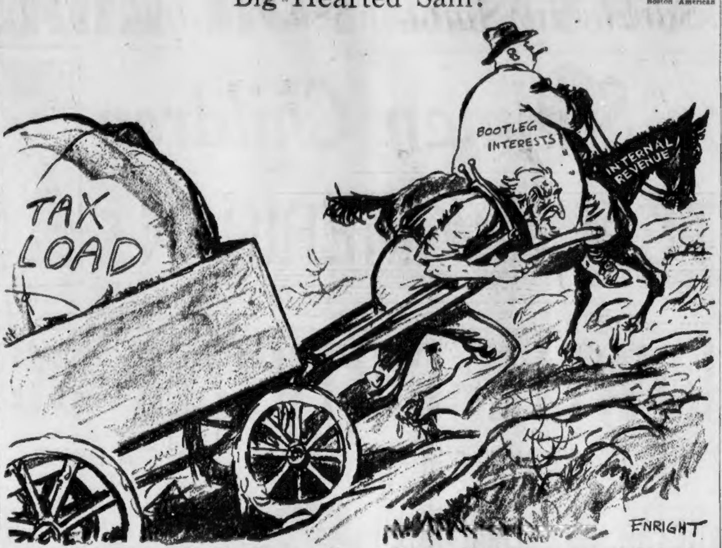
Big-Hearted Sam!

Copyright, 1931, Boston American



The Prohibition folly has saddled this nation with steadily increasing burdens. The bootleg industry is "BIG BUSINESS." The liquor bill of the nation is estimated at TWENTY-EIGHT HUNDRED FORTY-EIGHT MILLION DOLLARS yearly, placing it on par with the automobile, the steel and the oil industry.

But it pays no part of governmental costs.

...ied to McCormick, 20 years her junior, in a private ceremony at John D. Rockefeller's estate in Pocantico Hills, N. Y., yesterday, by Supreme Court Justice Witschief, Mack said. Her son, James, and her daughter-in-law were present, as was Mack.

For six years, since the Stillmans' marital troubles became front-page news, McCormick had been mentioned as a possible suitor.

Mrs. Stillman had ridiculed this, however, and pointed to the differences in their ages.

FATHER NOT SURPRISED.

Harold F. McCormick, chairman of the executive committee of the International Harvester Co., said in Chicago:

"My son's marriage comes as no surprise to me and it has my entire approval. I have known for some years of Fowler's unwavering devotion to Mrs. Stillman and of his desire for this outcome, and I have known, too, of her deep regard for him.

"My one concern is for their happiness. Basing my thought of what I know of them both, I not only hope, but truly believe that they will find in this marriage life-long contentment and comradeship."

Fowler McCormick, who is worth a fortune in his own right, was a close friend of Mrs. Stillman's son, James "Bud" Stillman, who married Lena Wilson, his mother's maid, the daughter of a Canadian lumberjack. He was best man at that wedding in the Quebec backwoods. He is a graduate of Princeton.

Fowler McCormick, located at Easthampton, said:

"We're going to play around here for some time—two or three weeks—I haven't had a vacation for a long time. Then back to Chicago and work."

Mr. McCormick is a traveling sales manager for the International Harvester Company.

It was at Mrs. Stillman's suggestion that McCormick entered the Harvester plant in Milwaukee as a worker in overalls. Five years ago she said:

"I told him he must know something about the business if he ever intended to run it. I suggested that he go to Milwaukee, where he was less known, and find out for himself how the machinery of the business, particularly the human machinery, operated."

At that time Mrs. Stillman said she had an "intellectual love" affair with Fowler, but they had not considered marriage. "We have been too good friends for that," she said. "And five years from now, wouldn't it be ridiculous for a woman of 50—and I am not imperishable, you know—to be the wife of a young man of 32?"

Publication of an article by Arnoldo Mussolini, brother of the premier, in which he deplored recent Fascist anti-church demonstrations, was seen as further evidence of the government's desire to conciliate the Vatican.

LITTLE RELIEF SEEN

Little can be immediately expected of the negotiations now in progress since they involve the ticklish questions of sovereignty, prestige and the interpretation of international agreements.

Arnolda Mussolini's article appeared in the Popolo D'Italia, semi-official Fascist newspaper. Behind its publication is seen the inspiring hand of the premier himself.

Dealing with the strained relations of the Vatican and government, arising out of the dissolution of Catholic clubs, the article struck a defiant note at the beginning, but continued in a placating tone. It said:

"Deplorable excesses do not constitute persecution. But the mitigation and repudiation of such excesses in an atmosphere of sincerity will bring the sun of concord to shine again on Italian life. After all, only some sections of the Catholic Action require elimination."

HARBOR STRIKE MAY BE AVERTED

Impending danger of a walkout or strike of tally clerks on the Boston waterfront, which might result in a general strike of longshoremen, may be averted as a result of interference by the Boston Port Authority today.

The battle in which steamship owners, contracting stevedores, and the tally clerks' union are engaged has been caused by a rule which tally clerks want the ship owners and stevedores to approve. The rule would preclude office help from checking cargo on the wharfs.

At a one-and-one-half-hour conference this morning between representatives of the International Longshoremen's Association and members of the Boston Tally Clerks' Union, it was decided that contending factions would put off action for Monday until representatives of all three organizations could reach an agreement.

Los Angeles, June 6 (INS)—The passenger steamer Harvard that went aground near Point Arguello last Saturday with 500 passengers aboard today was abandoned. Rough seas made further attempts to pull the wreck off the rocks impossible.

BAIL MONOPOLY GRIP BROKEN

Determined to snatch the bail bond business from a few commissioners said to be favored by police, Commissioner Hultman last night announced a new system by which the prisoner must make the selection of his bondsman without any aid from police.

Hultman has received protests from many of the 57 eligible bail commissioners, charging that one commissioner writes practically all of the bills in the city. Some men who live within a block of police stations charged that they never had been called.

The police head criticized the present system when he informed the department that the force "has no interest whatever in the personality of officials who take bail—."

He also ordered that "police officers shall not consider in any way the private interests of the authorized officials even by attempting to apportion the calls among them."

The practice of keeping business cards of certain bail commissioners in stations and distributing them to prisoners was ordered stopped immediately.

Loitering around police stations by bail commissioners, waiting for prisoners, was also ordered stopped.

YOUNGMAN NOW ATTACKS BOOTH

Worcester, June 6 (AP)—Lieut.-Gov. William S. Youngman today replied to the Worcester Telegram's refutation of his denial that in a speech Thursday night before the Harmony Club here the lieutenant governor had attacked the Senate. Mr. Youngman charged the editorial signed by George F. Booth, editor and publisher of the Worcester Telegram, "is a deliberate and malicious mess of distortion and misrepresentation."

"I do NOT retract or apologize for a single statement which I made at the dinner, but that is no reason why I should not object to inferences drawn beyond my statements," he said.

He denied that his letter yesterday to Gaspar G. Bacon, president of the Senate, was a retraction or an apology for anything he said at the meeting of the club. It was merely an explanation that the speech was not made for publication and a correction of the inference that he had attacked the present Senate, he said.

Purchase of the entire capital stock of the Central Telephone Company of Vermont was requested today by the New England Telephone & Telegraph Company in a petition to the Interstate Commerce Commission at Washington.

Agreements have been reached between the two companies for the purchase of 2,400 shares of Central stock for $8400, or the exchange of one share of New England for four shares of Central, it was stated.

No change in the operating personnel of the Central company is expected. The New England company already serves the Vermont company with toll service over leased wires.

"In the secondary schools we study what should have been finished earlier; in college we do what should have been done at school; in the graduate schools we work in a way that belongs to the college."

SEES IMPROVEMENT

However, President Lowell said that the work of schools was becoming better; that within the past 40 years the average age of freshmen entering Harvard has decreased almost an entire year, but that the students now were "distinctly more mature intellectually and socially."

A tribute to the work of education on "a national scale" done by Phillips Exeter, was paid by Thomas W. Lamont, '88, chairman of the exercises.

The spirit of Exeter today is just as it was a century and a half ago, the noted New York financier stated. He said its spirit of democracy, training of the mind, tradition for hard work makes it an institution "old yet ever new."

FUNDAMENTALS STRESSED

Gratitude for the felicitations from Dartmouth, Harvard, Yale Princeton, Brown, Amherst, Williams, Bowdoin and other colleges, was expressed by Dr. Lewis Perry, principal of Phillips Exeter. He also expressed gratitude to the men who had aided in turning out the thousands of Exeter man who have passed through life's milestones in the 150 years of Exeter's existence by declaring that it was "great teaching" which made a school great.

Instead of stressing "machinery and technique" the founders of Phillips Andover Academies stressed fundamentals, declared Dr. Alfred E Stearns, headmaster of Phillips Andover, at Andover, Mass., speaking for the preparatory schools.

action based on charges of political conspiracy against the Fascist government, the Vatican is told that clubs for Catholic women may reopen, but not Catholic clubs for men.

Pope Pius refuses this concession, saying it must be all or none.

The sun was still shining in Wall Street yesterday. Prices continued crawling timidly upward. Some bears "covered," remembering that there is no limit to the heights to which prices can climb. One man who sold a railroad stock short, because it had climbed 200 points, in a few days and he "knew it was silly," will never forget his sensations, as it climbed 700 points more.

That will not happen, just now, however.

Dr. Watters also identified the officer's bullet pierced uniform coat, and pointed out the hole through which the slayer fired a shot as O'Brien lay wounded on the sidewalk.

GERMANS' PAY CUT, TAX UP

Berlin, June 6 (AP)—The dreaded axe of government economy fell for the fourth time in Germany in 12 months today with the publication of Chancellor Bruening's emergency decrees, signed yesterday by President Von Hindenburg.

They provide for raising 1,650,000,000 marks (about $396,000,000) to balance deficits in the budget, by making further slashes in government expenditure and in civil service salaries, and by the imposition of a supplementary income tax and new taxes on sugar, petrol and cigarettes.

Roughly, one-half of the necessary amount is obtained from salary cuts and by reductions in the amounts allotted for public relief and other financial adjustments. The other half is produced by supplementary taxes, both on earned and unearned incomes, with the provision that persons whose incomes from both sources do not exceed 16,000 marks (about $3,840) annually, pay only one tax.

PANTAGES WINS LOVE CASE TILT

San Diego, Cal., June 6 (AP)—Alexander Pantages' victory in an appeal to the State Supreme Court from a conviction of criminal assault on a girl in Los Angeles won him the right today to inquire into the past life of a girl appearing against him here.

After Lydia Nitto, 17, had testified at the trial of the theater operator and three others in a "girl market" case yesterday that Pantages was intimate with her at a hotel party, gave her $10 and told her she was "too young to be here," the court gave Pantages' attorney permission to question her about her character.

The attorney drew from her the statement that she had worked only four weeks since going to Los Angeles from New York last year. She also admitted she had made an affidavit last year saying she was then 22 years old to obtain employment as a "taxi driver." She said, however, she was only 17.

5 KILLED 70 FT. UNDERGROUND

Philadelphia, June 6 (AP)—Five workmen, working in caisson holes 70 feet below the street level, were killed in a cave-in early today and a policeman was fatally injured when a patrol wagon, en route to the scene, crashed into a truck.

The workmen were entombed at the bottom of a 30-foot caisson hole, when the 40-foot side wall of an excavation for a 32-story Central City office building coollapsed.

Five other workmen were injured and 40 endangered as tons of dirt, rock and debris fell into the pit. At the end of two hours rescue work was halted until walls of the excavation could be reinforced.

Authorities said, the five men, if not crushed to death, had died of suffocation before the efforts to rescue them were halted.

The dead patrolman was Elmer Patterson, 45. He was thrown to the street as the patrol swerved into a telegraph pole after striking the truck and his skull fractured. Three other patrolmen were slightly injured in the crash.

BEACON HILL

—by—

Betty Alden

AN ACTIVE PROGRAM OF HORSE EVENTS STARTED The Millwood Hunt Horse Show, which was largely attended, at Waveney Farm yesterday and which will continue through today.

* * *

Mr. Reginald Bird, master of Waveney, and his two charming daughters, Miss Betty and Miss Patricia, assisted in dispensing hospitality. Not that we were the recipient of any of it—in fact we had to crash the gate to get in and didn't hear the dinner-bell—but nevertheless for the lucky ones we are glad.

MISS BETTY BIRD

* * *

Mr. Bird is giving a large luncheon this noon for exhibitors and friends but we are going to a wedding where we will be sure of our lunch.

* * *

Last evening George H. D. Lamson, M. F. H., held a stag dinner on his barn floor—we give you our word the festive board was the barn floor—in honor of judges and masters. George is a good fellow and has a fine string of horses, one of which, Flag o' Fashion, won the Belmont stakes last year, if we remember correctly.

* * *

We got a little kick out of Arthur Lovesay, veteran of the megaphone, who hails from Milton. It was comforting to hear in clear and manly tones who won the various classes even if we are still in the dark for what. If the winners of the blues and red can enlighten us—we sometimes doubt if they know themselves—their blase demeanor is not convincing.

* * *

Mrs. Gardiner H. Fiske Big Winner

MRS. GARDINER H. FISKE IS THE ONLY WINNER we have seen in a long time who looks pleased and proud of knowing what she has accomplished, and doesn't care who knows it, when she carries off the Gorham plate. She was the big winner of Friday.

* * *

WE MAY BE ENTIRELY WRONG—WE SOMETIMES are—but it seems to us that there isn't much real classy jumping shown by all of these veterans of the turf. Does a horse make a good jumper of a man or does a man make a good jumper of a horse? Now this is just an idea but we would honestly like to see a hunters class with horses and no riders. It is certainly a fine sight to see those powerful and graceful animals take the hurdles, but some of the riders look as though they might land over in Groton, and they seem to lack that devil-may-care spirit which inspires a crowd to cheers.

* * *

HOWEVER, THESE LITTLE intimate outdoor horse shows are well worth the price of admission and you can bring the family and the thermos bottles and get a week's supply of the sunshine vitamin. Some day when the horse lovers all get properly introduced, there will be a little more—a lot more we suggest—comradery, meaning—less New England nonchalance and more back-slapping and congeniality. The horse lovers are a bunch of good sports but they have not yet learned how to ride a hobby gracefully.

* * *

Blues and Reds

ONE NICE ELK INFERRED he was a bit disappointed that his beauties did not take first at a recent show—they got a red instead of a blue—and vouchsafed that a red cost as much as a blue to win. It reminded us of a remark made by an American when looking at an Alpine sunset, "It looks like a million dollars." Some people can't enjoy a thing unless it has a price tag on it and we gently suggested to the well-meaning horse-owner that he should be satisfied to own the blacks, let the reds and blues fall where they may.

* * *

THE CAMERAS WERE BUSILY clicking and for some reason the gallery did not appear as though we were going to pick their pockets while they looked at the camera, so we got some fine pictures. There were horse devotees from Cohasset, the Hugh Bancrofts and Coxes, the George H. Timmins from Groton, the Grafton Smiths from Hamilton and many others from distant points.

* * *

ELIZABETH DONHAM, WEARing a yellow and brown flowered print, attended with her fiance, Mr. Bacon. They are to be married on Monday. Mrs. Gelston King and Miss Ruth Baylies were gorgeous rail-birds. Barbara Young, still a headliner with us, was an interested spectator with M. B. Stone, Jr. A sweet trio were Phyllis Forbes, Helen Marshall and Abigail Aldrich—pretty buds of two years hence.

Elizabeth Donham

THIS MILLWOOD SHOW IS growing fast—a few years ago there were 75 entries, this year there were 650. A good deal of credit must go to the men and women who have kept up their interest in good times and poor times and have given America an added sports interest.

* * *

THE NEXT BIG EVENT IS the Eastern Horse Show at The Country Club on Wednesday, June 17, and Saturday, June 20, and the fifth annual at Raceland on Monday, June 22. There will be four steeplechases and two flat races each day, and three steeplechases and two flats at John Macomber's. It is as much fun as a County Fair; everybody goes, Rosie O'Grady and the Colonel's Lady.

White Top for Tri-Colors

By ANN ARDEN

ONE of the outstanding combinations in fashion is the light-topped costume. The contrast is achieved in numberless ways, but one of the most popular is the deep yoke of white. With color so rampant in fashion at the moment, it is quite in order that white as an accent should appear again and again. It is the popular note with blue, the ever-favored contrast to black, the distinctive twin with brown, and stunning with red.

* * *

* * *

* * *

WE'RE going to be French Colonial this summer whether we know it or not. The idea has got hold of French designers, especially those who do the hats, and those Agnes turbans without which your life is not complete, are, many of them, inspired by the wound about head effects that the natives in Algiers and Northern Africa wear about their heads. Sometimes they are done in the very colors that the natives wear—that is, reds and greens and yellows with bright blues added. But again their origin will be observable in wrapping content only and the colors will be less startling.

* * *

WHO WOULD have guessed how gay a patent leather belt could look girdling a formal crepe frock. And most appropriately, too. Now that patent leather comes in so many colors it offers a dashing color contrast to one's frock. An apricot colored frock is belted in brown patent. White with a red belt or black with a bright green are striking combinations, too.

Daughter of Young to Wed

By CHOLLY KNICKERBOCKER

New York, June 6 (US)—Society long has suspected the devoted attentions which Everett Needham Case, handsome Princeton "grad," has been showering upon Josephine Young, daughter of the Owen D. Youngs, would result in the joyous pealing of wedding bells.

Today I can confirm the suspicions of the elegantes.

An announcement of Josephine's betrothal to Case is being made today at the Young country house up in Van Hornesville, N. Y.

From sources close to the Youngs, I learn the official confirmation of the romance was to have been made several weeks ago, but was delayed due to the illness of Mr. Young's mother, Mrs. Jacob S. Young, who was gathered to her fathers on May 21, last, at the age of 93 years.

Josephine was graduated from Bryn Mawr College three years ago this month. She later traveled in the Old World for a year and then joined the educational department of the National Broadcasting Co.

Mr. Young's son-in-law-to-be is a son of Mr. and Mrs. James Herbert Case, Plainfield, N. J., and he was a member of the 1922 graduating class down at old Nassau. Later he took his degree in history at Corpus Christi College, Cambridge, England.

Following this engagement he leaves for lectures at Los Altros and Las Gatos. Then he goes to San Francisco to speak on a number of social problems under the auspices of the Laymen's Retreat League of that city. These lectures are to be delivered at the San Francisco University, formerly St. Ignatius' University.

The Common Good

The men and women who carry on the activities of each mill contribute much to the welfare and prosperity of that community.

To stimulate the industry of each mill so that congenial employment and pleasant surroundings may be provided to an ever-increasing number of worthy men and women, is the constant endeavor of the American Woolen Company.

True to Type
WINE, WOMEN AND OUR MAYORS ABROAD
By Gilbert Seldes

I have been trying for a week to find something to say in defense of the traveling American mayors. They seem to have made up their minds to be as offensive to the French people as anyone can be without being jailed, and they have acted like a grammar school club on a picnic where everything goes sour. I do not understand why the mayors are in France at all.

With New York absent, the burden naturally fell on Mayor John H. Porter, of Los Angeles, who so brilliantly started the proceedings when he refused to be photographed in the midst of Americans drinking in French wine a toast to the French people. Mayor Porter's extraordinary idea that the Eighteenth Amendment forbids Americans to drink on foreign soil added a comic touch to the muddle.

* * *

"Put Out the Light"

One of the commonest stories about Americans in Europe concerns the doughboy who went into a cathedral and hearing that an altar light had been burning for seven hundred years announced that that was long enough and blew it out. He was one soldier in several millions. Yet the story is considered typical and, in a sense, it is. America has blown out many European lights. We had some part in destroying the feudal system and we are having a much greater part in destroying the Europeans' habits of life, their standards of deportment and their whole system of values.

We are sending into Europe our habits of business and our standards of living. The old Europe frets and sighs and calls Americanization the greatest menace since the Goth and the Vandal—but it succumbs. There is definitely an hostility between us; it is unnecessary and it is often ridiculous, but what a Frenchman or an Italian considers a good and successful life is not what we consider a good and successful life. There ought to be room in the world for both, but if they clash there is no use pretending that the conflict is accidental.

Wine and Women

So far as we have given up drinking it has been because we are willing to sacrifice physical pleasure for an industrial and moral gain. The French prefer to sacrifice these gains and to keep the pleasure. They have gone farther and made an art of the satisfaction of their appetites. To us that seems trivial and even immoral.

This does not exactly justify Mayor Porter for making a scene in the home of his host. It does not justify Mayor Marvin of Syracuse for criticizing the conduct of the street women of Paris and the opinion of Mayor Walmsley (of what city?) that "the Casino display of flesh is notable" is entirely gratuitous. Mayors who go to leg shows get exactly what they deserve.

* * *

A Possible Protest

But there may be an excuse for the teetotal Mayor Porter. He may have said to himself:

"There is little virtue in being a dry in a land of drys. What we want is a demonstration. When Luther had to make his stand for his faith he didn't circulate his ideas among his own converts. He wrote them out and nailed them to the door of the Diet of Worms. A demonstration is only effective in the right place. And the right place on this occasion is the one which will provoke the most comment. I will sacrifice my reputation as a gentleman; I will transgress every law of courtesy and offend my friends and my enemies alike. So help me Volstead, I can do no other."

I have never been a mayor myself and the psychology of an office-holder is a closed book to me, so that I cannot be sure that this is how Mayor Porter thought it out. Yet I feel that he ought to be given the benefit of the doubt. I hardly believe that Los Angeles is so dry that the mayor committed his blunder to impress the folks at home. I am sure that if somebody at a great dinner of prohibitionists cried out, "What about a little drink at this point?" and poured himself one from a flask, he would be hailed as a martyr and hero, and not condemned as a boor.

Thirty Cents

I think that Mr. Heywood Broun, who was utterly offended by Mayor Porter, would appreciate the action of a man who in a crowded theater, listening to a dogmatic and illiberal speech, threw three dimes on the stage to indicate his opinion of the speaker and as a demonstration for the true faith. I do not see why the martyrs for radical opinion should always be pitied because they are "sincere but misguided," and the martyrs for reactionary opinion should always be considered hypocrites.

* * *

For Pink Wine

Yet somehow Mayor John H. Porter, of Los Angeles, does not appeal to me. Emerson once said that God forgives everything but bad manners.

I noticed that at one of the luncheons the mayors attended, white, red and rose wine were served. The last of these is not familiar to America. It is a light wine of the color of strawberry pop, very slightly intoxicating, extraordinary agreeable to the palate and absurdly cheap. It is hardly ever bottled and is served in carafes in every restaurant in Paris. I suspect that it is a watered wine, and I am pretty sure that it hasn't body enough to stand transportation.

Yet I think that if anything could soften a prohibitionist's heart, it would be this wine, which is so pleasant to look upon when the sunlight falls on it and which marches so well with a few hors-d'oeuvre and an omelet. The great strength of prohibition was that it could thunder against the demons of rum and whiskey, but no one could thunder against vin rose. It is too ingratiating and too innocent, and even too young.

Other Men's Thoughts

From Prof. W. B. Pitkin's "The Art of Learning," to be published by Whittlesey House:

"The flood of novelties mounts day by day. No man can stem it, none can drink it to the full. Have you read Mr. Einstein's latest? What about that new chemical which makes wood waterproof and fireproof? Petroleum has been found in such quantities beyond the Amazon that the politics of all South America will be transformed.

"Pulsations cause stars to form and to disintegrate . . . Thus it goes, on and on.

"Would you keep in touch with your own generation? Then you must learn fast and learn much. In one year you must pick up more facts than Aristotle ever knew."

"Shall I drive through the park, sir?"

A Bull
By the Reader

We used to think Sir Boyle Roche's bull: "This shoeleather tax will work another hardship on Ireland's barefooted peasantry," unique until Ellis Parker Butler sent this telegram to Mary Roberts Rinehart:

"Tish is a peach so firmly anchored in America's heart that her own impetus will carry her irresistibly onward to new pinnacles in the garden of fame."

The reason being that all Mrs. Rinehart's "Tish" stories will be republished in the now popular omnibus style, twenty years after the first came out in the weekly founded by Benjamin Franklin, Esq.

* * *

It has been a decade since a book on cipher codes of any importance came out, and it is doubtful if any were more exciting than Herbert O. Yardley's "American Black Chamber" (Bobbs-Merrill).

Yardley ran the cryptographci bureau in Washington during the war, and decoded thousands of secret messages—of both friend and foe. He certainly spills a lot of black cats out of the bag. Government codes, you must know, are to crossword puzzles of the hardest sort as the Einstein theory is to twice two make four.

Japanese, Russian, Mexican and invisible-ink Spanish codes, these Yardley cracked like nuts. He made embassies sweiter, a few necks to snap at the rope's end, and the account of the bureau's doings makes super-Oppenheim reading. Not many names are mentioned. It is the ambassadors here who will be embarrassed.

He doesn't even say who the Secretary of State was who broke up the bureau and undid all the work to save foreign feelings—and Russia's, too, but he is mildly "het up" about it.

Stimson must have a difficult time finding out what the Soviet arm thinks over here. Meantime, there is brain-teasing and mystery a-plenty in Yardley's ingenious if undiplomatic, opus.

The Wizard of Menlo Park may be the next subject for Emil Ludwig to appraise. And he may see him for about an hour before Herr Ludwig flits elsewhere—to Greece or Switzerland where he keeps his biographical workshop.

Meanwhile he now is in New York, talking not biography, but drama, for his play, "Versailles," in which Woodrow Wilson is the leading figure, may be seen under the auspices of the Theter Guild.

Says Herr Ludwig:

"My pet aversion is the twisting of history to meet the requirement of romantic fiction. It isn't necessary at all. The biographer must learn that it isn't he who must preside over human destinies, and that the Almighty is a better craftsman than any human artist."

"Schliemann," the story of the little German indigo merchant who unearthed ancient Troy and became a great archaeologist, is Ludwig's latest book. Because of it, Metropolitan Museum officials report a greatly increased interest in Greek relics and statuary.

A Corner Lot

For years wild blossoms have rambled riot there—
Rue, shy anemones, and violets,
Proud tiger lilies, and gay Bouncing Bets,
Grown from the seeds that on stray breezes fare
To beautify the plots neglect left bare,
And, on the dingy street, its blossoming
Blew like a breath of some long vanished spring
On toil-worn folk who paused its scent to share.
Since wider daily spreads the teeming town,
And workmen's heavy, heedless feet tread down
All evidence of bloom and color bright;
I wonder if it grieves in wistful pain
That it may bear no loveliness again.

In Berlin
By Bruno Lessing

Berlin—Called on an Englishman who lives in a pension in the suburbs. This particular one was run by an Englishwoman and all the boarders were English. Terribly so.

I found my Englishman dressing for dinner and he insisted upon my dining with him.

"I wouldn't have dressed if I had known you were coming," he said, "but I'm more than half through. Besides, it would look strange, come to think of it, if I didn't dress. But it's perfectly all right for you. You didn't know you were going to dine here and besides, you're American. They won't mind a bit."

I'm sure I didn't mind, but I'm afraid they did. There were about fourteen or fifteen of them in the dining-room, all in dinner clothes. And they stared at me in strong disapproval. They were all people of moderate means and while circumstances had torn them away from England, nothing but illness or death could part them from the habit of dressing for dinner.

Such Dinner Clothes!

And such dinner clothes! Old, shabby and shiny. And collars and shirt-fronts were not particularly clean. The women's dresses were mostly frowsy. But they were low-cut. And that was the point. My light gray suit was comparatively new and quite clean. But it wasn't proper for dinner. I caught two men looking at me and then exchanging a smile. And the dinner, prepared by an English cook, was a crime.

But my Englishman has a sense of humor.

"My fellow-boarders," he said, when he came to see me the next day, "are furious with me."

"For inviting a man in street clothes to dinner?" I asked.

"No," he said with a smile. "Of course they all wanted to know who the terrible bounder was. But when I explained that you were a multimillionaire who had come to ask my advice about investing several millions in Germany, they said it was outrageous that I hadn't introduced you."

German business-men are really business-like. They work hard and they waste neither your time nor theirs. They do not take two hours off for lunch like the French. Nor do you have to make appointments by mail a week ahead, as in England. They are very much like the best type of American business men only, of course, not so prosperous.

Government officials are very much like our own. They love to assert their authority, they always keep you waiting and they cannot get it into their heads that they are the servants of the people and not their masters.

* * *

The Police Force

The cops are about as intelligent as you expect cops to be, but they look rather dignified. There are no Professor Einsteins on the force.

An American woman, strolling down Unter den Linden, was accosted by a man who spoke to her in English. Seeing a cop close by she made a complaint.

"That man spoke to me," she said.

"He said, 'Isn't it a lovely day!' " said the woman. The cop looked at the sky, tucked his note-book back into his pocket and frowned.

"If you don't like the weather," he said, "you are hard to please."

We had a French chauffeur who drove the car into the wrong end of a one-way street and the cop stopped him.

"The chauffeur is French," I hastily explained, "and he's dumb. I'm American and I'm looking for my hotel."

"All Frenchmen are dumb," said the cop, gloomily. And then, his face brightening, "I've got a son in America. In Pittsburgh in the steel business. His name is Schmitt—Adolph Schmitt. Maybe you know him."

"The name is very familiar," I said. "I'll look him up when I get back. But how do we get to our hotel?"

"Go right ahead," said the cop. "And when the officer at the end of the street stops you point back to me. I'll be standing here."

We were stopped and I pointed and everything was k. o. I think cops are nice and human all over the world.

Writers' Facial Tests

The handsomest living authors are John Drinkwater and Genevieve Taggard; the most intelligent-looking, Eugene O'Neill and Rose Macaulay.

At least these are the conclusions of the editors of the H. W. Wilson Company, voting on the 400 photographs of contemporary writers that illustrate "Living Authors," the book of biographies published by that company.

Scattering single votes pronounced Maxim Gorky "the most illiterate looking;" Charles Erskine Scott Wood "the most magnificently hirsute;" Mary Borden "the most chic;" A. P. Herbert "the funniest;" Theodore Dreiser "the gloomiest;" Sigrid Undset "the most inflexible;" Thomas Mann "the most domestic;" Arthur Machen "the most incredible;" William Rose Benet "the most enigmatic;" James Joyce "the most sensitive."

WILKINS' ARCTIC SUB IS FAR OFF COAST

work, we are making good headway in a moderately smooth sea. Things are shaking down well on board but everyone was so exhausted with the strenuous preparations to depart that they deserved and had a small respite.

"IRON MIKE" A BOON

Our Sperry compass and automatic "iron mike," an automatic steering gear, is a great boon to the watch on deck. Faithfully the little motor, controlled by the directive force of the master compass, swings the steering gear to left or right, correcting for each jolt on the bow by a wave or a wavering of difference between the two propellers.

Either of those things might put the ship off her course, but the "iron mike" is on the job and once set it needs no guiding hand. Our thanks are due the Sperry company for their thoughtfulness in providing it. It is the first time, we believe, that such a device has ever steered a submarine.

It is an innovation that will probably be copied.

CUTTER HANGS ON

Sunshine and moderate seas encourage us to believe that our lucky star is shining. The ship is behaving well and is not likely to be troublesome, we think, even in nasty weather.

Capt. Danenhower, who has been steadily on the job for two days without sleep, was able to obtain a little rest while Commander Schlossbach, our navigating officer, took the bridge.

But the engine room staff is still hard at work. It is a long time since they have had any regular rest. Their starboard engine is inclined to play up a little bit but I feel sure that Chief Engineer Shaw and his men will master it in a day or so.

Meanwhile we are proceeding hopefully toward our great adventure.

Our escort, the ice patrol cutter Ponchartrain, follows soberly and respectfully behind. The movie men on board are probably wondering about, and perhaps hoping to see, what our ship might do in rough weather.

But ahead the way seems clear.

Nautilus Running Through Dense Fog

Sir Hubert Wilkins' polar submarine Nautilus, on the first leg of a journey to the polar ice cap, was running through dense fog, 238 miles east of Cape Cod light, according to a radio message from the coast guard cutter Pontchartrain, the submersible's convoy.

The Nautilus, slightly in advance of her convoy, was running at reduced speed through the morning fog, the radiogram received at Eastern coast guard headquarters said.

The cutter will accompany the submarine as far as the Grand Banks, after which the Nautilus will complete the crossing to London alone.

Our plans? Seven hundred strong—perhaps we should say seven hundred weak—will be at the Vacation House this summer.

Well, we will tell you more about it as time goes on. Of course, these letters from the youngsters and our own preparation for the opening of the season suggest mentioning the joy-land of the poor children—our Vacation House.—Catholic Welfare Bureau.

Dr. F. H. Knubel

The Rev. Frederick H. Knubel, president of the United Lutheran Church of America, is probably the best known Lutheran in this country. When the United Lutheran Church was organized in 1918 through the merger of three Lutheran bodies he was elected president and has held that high position ever since.

The Rev. Frederick K. Stamm, pastor of the Clinton Ave. Congregational Church of Brooklyn, who has been heard on several occasions in radio programs, now becomes a regular speaker throughout the season.

Two other voices which have become thoroughly familiar to radio audiences during other summers will be heard again this summer—the Rev. Charles L. Goodell, executive secretary of the Federal Council's Commission on Evangelism, and the Rev. Ralph W. Sockman, minister of the Madison Avenue Methodist Episcopal Church, New York.

The schedule of the Sunday afternoon radio hours sponsored by the Federal Council will be as follows:

The Friendly Hour from 3 to 4 p. m., WJZ and Associated Stations, Dr. F. K. Stamm, speaker.

God the Only Cause and Creator

A Christian Science program of service for tomorrow in all Christian Science churches has for a lesson-sermon, "God the Only Cause and Creator."

The golden text is: "Let all the earth fear the Lord; let all the inhabitants of the world stand in awe of him. For he spake, and it was done; he commanded, and it stood fast" (Psalms 33:8, 9).

Among the citations which comprise the lesson-sermon is the following from the Bible: "And they came to Jericho: and as he went out of Jericho with his disciples and a great number of people, blind Bartimaeus, the son of Timaeus, sat by the highway side begging. And when he heard that it was Jesus of Nazareth, he began to cry out, and say, Jesus thou son of David, have mercy on me . . . And Jesus said unto him, Go thy way; thy faith hath made thee whole. And immediately he received his sight, and followed Jesus in th ywea" hrdlu aoin cm Jesus in the way" (Mark 10:46, 47, 52).

Well Known Men and Women on Common

Members of the Church League for Democracy of the Episcopal Church will meet tomorrow at 2:30 to appear on Boston Common near the Charles st. gate and speak under the auspices of the Greater Boston Federation of Churches. The speakers are:

Nash, professor Episcopal Theological School, Cambridge; Miss Vida Scudder, many years professor at Wellesley College; Rev. Wolcott Cutler, St. John's Episcopal Church, Charlestown; Rev. Smith O. "Chinese Night," as Dr. Brooks calls it, is open to the public.

VACATION TIME LOOMS FOR THE CHURCHES

He hopes to be Eliot of the Arlington St. Church soon goes to his delightful home at North East Harbor. The Rev. George Lyman Paine of the Federation of Churches plans to take a trip to Mexico with the Herbert Herring seminar. He hopes to be able to do something to interpret Mexico as he has Russia this past winter.

Northfield on the Connecticut will have an active summer with classes and entertainments. Ocean Grove will again welcome hundreds of Baptists on the shores of Maine. Methodists are expecting a record attendance at Westford camp.

The Catholic Charitable Bureau will transport nearly a thousand young people to the Nantasket house for short outings. Unitarians and Congregationalists are once more to take possession of Star Island off Portsmouth.

Not only are the churches making use of the country, but hundreds of social agencies are joining in the great exodus with numerous camps and caddy camps. Benevolent people can do a great service by contributing to some child's vacation.

Dr. Major Is Still in West

The Rev. E. J. Evans will again preach for Dr. Harold Major of the First Baptist Church. His morning sermon subject is "The Enthroned Christ," and in the evening "The Bitter and the Sweet." Dr. Major will be back in his pulpit next week after attendance at the Northern Baptist convention in Kansas City, Missouri.

The First Church is preparing for a large Bible convention of the World Wide Varanca Phidalthea to meet July 8-12. Among the prominent speakers are to be Bishop Anderson, the Rev. Robert Watson, of the Lord's Day League, the Rev. G. D. Feagan of the Arlington Baptist Church, and others. This conference is undenominational and the public is invited.

Bishop Peterson to Bless New Church

The new building of the Church of Our Lady, Trapelo rd., Waltham, will be blessed tomorrow afternoon by Rt. Rev. John B. Peterson, auxiliary bishop of Boston.

Agents Unite to Revive the 'Road'; a Barrymore Points to the Way

By NICHOLAS YOUNG

Nicholas Young

FOR THE better part of two seasons the best doctors of our shrivelling drama have been sitting in solemn diagnoses. What the boys have been trying to discover is what really ails the patient and what remedial nostrum will stem the anemia and build up new tissue. The professors have almost reached a decision and are pretty nearly willing to ascribe the ills of Boston, New York, and other points west, to the aches and pains already so well described in regions known as the "road." Save the "road," they exclaim, and you will bring the theater back to health and happiness. Well, so far the "road" has brought small cheer to the men who risk their dollars in royalties and production. For some time it has been the drama's sorest point and wildest delusion.

For, if you must know, the stretch of country spotted by one-night stands, has not responded to fervent appeal; it has not even batted the proverbial eyelash. Traveling companies, sent forth in good faith, have floundered—then collapsed. George M. Cohan, impelled by an honest desire to prove that there is still good one-night stand terrain, made expedition therein.

Sloganeers Spring to the Rescue

But Mr. Cohan quickly changed his mind after a few weeks of not so much coming in and so much going out. Still the "road" dangles its temptations before those who like to be tempted. Now the TPROA (Theatrical Press Representatives of America), alive to its own importance in restoring safe and sound road conditions, have started a new movement backed with the resounding slogan, S. O. S.—Save Our Stage!" This lively force is propelled by men whose business it is to coax audiences into the theater, by men fully acquainted with the selling problems of musical comedy and legitimate drama. These intelligent, active partisans of a better theater, believe the renascence of successful one-night-stands will bring about some lusty competition in the producing centers. They undoubtedly are right, but the campaign must be carried into enemy territory.

And so, with 50,000 S. O. S. buttons for the coat lapels of the faithful, the press agents themselves propose to carry a good drama into what have been empty spaces. Committees are at work; the best minds are wrestling with the problems. Any working arrangement that will re-open the Penn Yans and the Kalamazoos to a legitimate drama fresh from Broadway's steaming grill will prove a stimulant that will not pass unheeded. If the drama has disappeared from the cross-roads, it has suffered corresponding lapses in the key cities. Each depends upon the other for prosperous continuity.

Miss Barrymore Crosses the Alps

But now, it seems, while others have sat in rigorous conclave, Ethel Barrymore, on her account, boldly moved out upon the "road" just to prove that it existed; that it was dormant, not dead. With tonight's performance of "The Love Duel" in Albany, Miss Barrymore will have completed a tour of 66 towns in 23 states. And she has conquered every stronghold supposed to be adamant against travelling companies which dabble in out-and-out drama. Not since Sir Johnston Forbes-Robertson completed his farewell tour in America in 1916 has an important American player ventured a tour of these smaller cities. Miss Barrymore did 60 one-night stands; when she could not find a theater she set her scenery in civic, lodge and school auditoriums. More pleasant to relate, congregations of one to four thousand people greeted her.

Incidentally, among the thousands was Gene Howe, hard-to-please editor in Amarillo, Texas. Brother Gene is noted as a bawler-out of celebrities, and having dared to vent his spleen on such personages as Col. Charles Augustus Lindbergh and Sarah Bernhardt, it is plain that Miss Barrymore had an ordeal in Amarillo. That she not only passed through it successfully, but, it is reported, completely mollified Mr. Howe, is another feather in her cap.

What Miss Barrymore really has done is to take good drama, by good people, into neglected territory. On her tour she discovered playgoers just as keen as any on Broadway—or on Boylston street. Her plays were not always presented under the most advantageous circumstances, but they were well done, of course, even if given in an auditorium. At any rate, we are told, she was not required to give "The Love Duel" in a tent, as was required of Mme. Bernhardt on her final tour of the wild and wide open Southwest.

FAIR WEATHER FOR TWO

This hands across the table situation finds Lew Ayers and Joan Bennett making plans for pleasant days to come; and they are about completed. It's in "Many a Slip" at RKO Boston.

HIGHLIGHTS, BOTH GRIM AND GAY, IN WEEK'S FILMS

EXPECTANT

Novarro Film at Orpheum

"Daybreak," starring Ramon Novarro, now at Loew's Orpheum, brings back a Novarro with a monocle and a Teutonic haircut, very different from the Spanish gentleman of "In Gay Madrid" and "Call of the Flesh."

Speed, color, rhythm and novelty highlight the entertaining stage show. Myers, Lubow and Rice and their sumptuous revue are the topline attraction. This great trio of dancers and their talented company of terpsichorean assistants offer a highly diversified exhibition of stage dancing that provides splendid entertainment. Comedy of the slapstick variety is the contribution of Curley Burns and Company in their hilarious skit. Amusing hokum and pleasing musical touches make the offering of Phil Seed and Dave London a thoroughly enjoyable one. Lila Campos, petite comedienne, and Archie and Gertie Falls, knockabout acrobatic comedians, provide other acts on the bill.

Miscellaneous short reels and the Hearst Metrotone newsreel are also offered.

Corbett Dance Revue at the Lyric on Monday

The Corbett Dance Revue will be presented at the Lyric Theater, Monday, when a cast of nearly 400 will offer an elaborate and diversified program of music and dancing. The affair is sponsored and directed by Mary V. Corbett, who with her sisters, Kay and Peggy, won their laurels on the professional musical comedy stage, and at present conduct the Mary V. Corbett School of the Dance. This year's revue will feature a television and radio number, a fan dance, "After Gainsborough," the "Sea Chest," a Pirate dance fantasy, and "Esprit de Corps," a military number.

Summer Schedule Is Under Way at Gayety

E. M. Loew, owner of the new Gayety, starts his summer schedule today by adding two short subjects to his regular program of two feature photoplays. A modern refrigeration system has been installed in the Gayety that will keep the temperature of comfort throughout the summer months. The feature pictures for tomorrow are Ann Harding in "Holiday" and Fay Wray in "Captain Thunder." An entire change of show comes on Monday with David Manners in "Dracula" and Conrad Nagel in "Free Love."

Fair Joan Crawford Again the Lure on the State Screen

By HARRIS MORGAN

Joan Crawford at last gets her big chance—the one she has yearned for—a chance to act. The role she has in "Laughing Sinners," at Loew's State, even demands for a brief space that she conceal that great beauty of hers; but her admirers have ample opportunity to revel in her charms during the course of the ups and downs of her fate as "Ivy," a lass with a past.

• • •

The story, based on the Kenyon Nicholson play, "Torch Song," deals with Ivy's heart affair with a traveling salesman, played by Neil Hamilton; and with her fortunes after he abruptly ends their intimacy to wed a wealthy girl. The jilted sweetheart is saved from suicide by the Salvation Army. Carl, a young captain in the Salvation Army, is sympathetic and his friendly overtures do much to restore Ivy's self-respect. He interests her in the work of the Army, and in serving less fortunate people she forgets her own heartache.

Neil Hamilton

Chance places Ivy and Howard in the same town a year or so later. Try as she might, she finds the flesh weaker than her spiritual strength. Howard is upset by her melancholy and tries to snap her out of it. One of his pals gives Ivy a few drinks and she gets hilarious and starts singing riotously.

• • •

Carl hears the uproar and comes to Howard's room, where he finds Ivy dressed in one of the daring sample-frocks from Howard's stock. When Howard boasts that Ivy is again his companion in love, Carl knocks him flat.

Carl pleads with Ivy. Trying to restore her self-esteem, he tells her that almost everyone stumbles a few times along the right path. He tells her that it is no grievous sin to make a few mistakes if one has the will to remedy them. When Howard comes for her, ready to leave with her, she tells him that she is through—this time she is sticking to her good resolutions!

• • •

The star does not fare so well with her dramatic attempt, and Mr. Hamilton also falls short. Minor characters turn in far classier effort; notably, Marjorie Rambeau, Clark Gable, George F. Marion and Roscoe Karns.

Pops Tonight

The Pop concert in Symphony Hall tonight is entirely a public affair with the added festivity of a Tech night. The program follows:

"Carmen," Prelude	Bizet
"The Roman Carnival," Overture	Berlioz
"A Midsummer Night's Dream," Scherzo	Mendelssohn
"The Deluge," Prelude	Saint-Saens
Violin solo: Julius Theodorowicz
"Danse Macabre," Symphonic Poem	Saint-Saens
"Ballet of the Hours," "Gioconda"	Ponchielli
Victor Herbert Favorites	Sanford
"Artists' Life," Waltz	Strauss
"Mignon," Entr-acte	Thomas
"Bolero"	Ravel

LAUGH IN EVERY GESTURE

Edna Hibbard, colorful comedienne of "High Hat" at the Wilbur, is about the most comical little lady of today's drama; she's clever, too. Sketched by Staff Artist Charles Schmidt.

BEWITCHING

Greta Nissen is one of the stars in "Women of All Nations" at Olympia and Uptown.

The 'Slavers' Are Foiled

The importance and usefulness of the Travelers' Aid Society is forcibly and clearly illustrated in "Fighting the Slavers," foreign film exposing the activities of international slave rings, now at the Majestic.

The dangers for young girls traveling unaccompanied, particularly at big terminals in big cities, is revealed in a sequence, which shows one of the young girls, about whom the story revolves, arriving at Budapest, where she is accosted by a member of the ring. The intervention of a worker for the Travelers' Aid Society, who makes inquiries as to her destination, successfully disposes of the intruder.. In every large terminal all over the world the society maintains agencies for the protection of strangers, and is one of the most potent factors which works against organized vice.

Members of the organization have viewed the film at both private and public showings wherever it has been screened, and are unanimous in their approval of its merit as an educational feature and a warning to young women.

Special Arrangements for Children at the Met

Effective June 11 and continuing throughout the summer months, a new scale of prices for children 12 years and under is announced for the Metropolitan. Vacation prices will be 15 cents for all children, up to the age of 12, from the opening of the theater in the forenoon until 6 o'clock in the evening. Special attractions for the children are to be featured in the Metropolitan Grand Lounge during the summer. A summer "camp" is to be installed next week and in conjunction with this during the vacation period special attractions will be announced from time to time.

Constance Bennett Star in Film at the Bowdoin

At the Bowdoin Square beginning tomorrow, the management offers a picture and vaudeville bill of merit. The top screen feature is "Born to Love" with Constance Bennett. Another offering is Loretta Young and Grant Withers in "Too Young to Marry." Wednesday is Cabaret night with extra features of vaudeville. Beginning Thursday the features will be Lew Ayres in "Iron Man," and "Aloha," with Ben Lyon and Raquel Torres, and seven acts of vaudeville.

A Little Child Shall Lead Voice and Vista Folk to Smiles and Tears

By HARLEIGH SCHULTZ

Jackie Cooper

Score two for that boy player of the Western World, Jackie Cooper! He's an actor, is that kid! Capable of holding his own in the best of adult cinema company, he gets in his second clutch on the hill climb to stardom in his own right, in "Donovan's Kid," now at RKO Keith's. Jackie is multum in parvo—a very great deal, indeed, in a little brain and body. Beside the stalwart form of Richard Dix, this chappie of studios measures up man-size in histrionic talent, sets an easy, yet snappily speedy pace for the grown-ups to follow, and by all the judgments of audience reactions, captures the current film as his very own. Here is the true new thing under the movie sun, this play boy revealed as a surprisingly fine boy player. In miming, the equal of all the screen children that ever were, he goes to the juvenile peak by his mastery of the lights and shades of his voice.

"Donovan's Kid" turns out to be cousin german to the rare product of the studios, which the industry hails as "natural." It is sure-fire in its audience appeal; it wins sympathy and interest, has its stirring sequences which grip the heart, while other passages just drip the honey of abundant genuine humor. Its laughs are wholesome, and numerous. If there be strain upon the tear-ducts, along comes the irrepressible fun of Jackie—that bath in a tin tub, for instance. Here's a youngster who can turn on the faucets for the "weeps," or as quickly douche the audience with cooling showers of laughter!

Childhood Hath Its Filmdom Fling

This Radio picture, based on the tale of "Big Brother," a silent drama, quickly establishes its tempo, the start-off of dissolving film setting us down amid a Gotham East Side of years ago, where Dix is the head of a gang, and little Jackie the son of one of his men. The father is killed by rival crooks; and Dix takes the boy under his wing. A priest and his niece are drawn into the weaving, the girl, of course, to supply the love theme. Thanks be, this is not overdone. Due to her pleas for the boy's sake, Dix goes straight. Then a society steps in to salvage Jackie, and Dix goes berserk in his rage.

The girl, employed as cashier, is victim of a payroll "stick up," and Dix is accused. He escapes from the police, and is shot down immediately after he has held up the hold-up men and rescued the missing cash. The finish comes soon, well done, even if mushily contrived.

The whole is melodrama, entirely at the mercy of the actors for its success. Because they meet the test, particularly Dix and "Skippy" Cooper, the teeming sentimentality never seems mawkish, save at the flourish for the end. Even then, the observer is in too soft a mood to find fault..

"Donovan's Kid" packs a number of punches. It is done with realism, and the acting generally is sterling. Dix will not only please all the women admirers, but he is superb in the gangster role. He and Jackie make a great pair in movie annals. We offer them as such; and further, suggest that little Jackie's voice from the church choir is the best thing in a human sort of way, that the music screen has produced. Frank Sherman is excellent as the clergyman; Marion Shilling sufficiently good as the central girl figure. The picture's weak point is its direction; but it remains, for all its faults, a great draw for the box office.

Louise Groody at the RKO Boston

At the RKO Boston today Louise Groody holds the spotlight, the musical comedy star's stage companion being Neville Fleeson. "Storiettes" is the title of their sketch. Other acts on the bill are: William and Joe Mandel, comedy acrobats; Dick Henderson, the Cook Sisters, and the Christensen Brothers.

On screen the Boston offers Lew Ayres and Joan Bennett in "Many a Slip," apparently another flaming youth film. Slim Summerville, Rocsoe Karns and J. C. Nugent are noted among the players, so that the humor should be excellent.

According to advance information in hand, the picture has a few thin-ice sex angles. The heroine discovers herself to be head over heels in love with a youth who is something of a misogamist. The jazzy lass, thinking she "knows her onions," snares him with her statement that the stork is hanging around somewhere, and their honeymoon happiness is enlivened by things that happen to the girl's mother, estranged from her husband. Of course the old folks are reconciled ere the fade-out comes. Oddly enough, also, there is an infusion of fun over the supposed motherhood of a maid, an idea that is reminiscent of a phase of "It's a Wise Child."

The film has in its cast Virginia Sale, sister of the famous "Chic." Miss Sale has been around the studios for the past four years, starting in "shorts," and rising gradually until she is now in demand as a character comedienne.

PROSPECTS ARE CHEERING

You can see at a glance that it's a proposal. Hardie Albright and Dorothy Jordan are facing an amusing problem in the film drama of youth, "Young Sinners." (Scollay and Fenway.)

William De Mille Picked to Direct 'Dover Road' as Paramount Film

By LOUELLA O. PARSONS
Motion Picture Editor Universal Service

Copyright, 1931, by Universal Service

LOS ANGELES, June 6—The most barrie-esque director in Hollywood is William De Mille. C. B., his brother, makes spectacular dramas, but it is William who does the delicately subtle type of play. That is why he has been selected by Paramount to direct A. A. Milne's "Dover Road."

Interesting, I think, is the fact that Paramount has had "The Dover Road" for months but not a move was made because Jesse L. Lasky just couldn't get the right man to direct it. When his old friend, Bill De Mille, signed with Paramount—well, that was another matter.

Louella O. Parsons

Sam Raphaelson, the jazz-singer boy, is doing the adaptation and the picture will be one of this present summer's products.

THAT MOST gracious lady of the screen, Kay Francis, is once again on the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer lot, after going into a huddle to decide who should play the leading feminine role opposite Lionel Barrymore in "Guilty Hands," the unanimous vote was in favor of Miss Francis. "Guilty Hands" is the thrilling mystery murder tale written directly for the screen by that past master of this type of play. Bayard Veiller. S. W. Van Dyke, heretofore expert on travel numbers, is as we said a few days ago, the director.

THERE ARE those who say Ricardo Cortez's success has gone completely to his head. He used to be a simple, well-meaning soul, but now he has his secretary speak to interviewers. He dodges most of them and absolutely refused to give any sort of a story to the newspaper folk. I hope this isn't true, for better men than Cortez have been put out of business through lack of common sense. He is to have the lead opposite Irene Dunne in "Symphony of Six Million," as we announced. Ricardo Cortez, a few months ago, couldn't get a job anywhere. Today he has everything his own way. Let's hope it doesn't go to his head. It would be just too bad.

A NEW MARIE DRESSLER, restored in health and looking as she did when I first knew her in New York, discussed many plans. Marie and Polly Moran have just finished "Politics." "It's good," said Marie, "even if I do say as shouldn't." When Marie praises one of her own pictures you can be sure it's a topnotcher. She makes one more, "Emma," a delightful story written especially for her by Frances Marion and then a trip to Europe. Marie has a large circle of friends on the other side who have been paging her each day and she admits she is eager to be on her way. We don't blame her for we are so tired we are looking forward to a promised holiday.

OH THESE rumors! How they intrigue. The latest is the romance of Ernst Lubitsch and Ona Munson. Ernst and Ona now occupy the table of romance at the Embassy where Lady June Inverclyde and Lothar Mendes formerly sat. What could be more interesting than to have the two old friends, Lothar and Ernst, carry on their romances at the same table. A friend of each says when Ernst gets his decree of freedom there may be a marriage in the offing. Well, both are nice people and we wish them good luck.

SNAPSHOTS of Hollywood collected at random: MARIE DRESSLER, looking much better than she has in six months, lunching at the Embassy with a group of friends. BEN LYON hurting his leg on the set when a chandelier fell and struck him. VIOLA DANA greeting old friends on her first visit to Hollywood since her marriage. The FITZMAURICE twins, the pride of the Hollywood hospital, being admired by visitors who saw them behind glass doors. SESUE HAYAKAWA'S friends extending a cordial welcome to him. FLORABELLE MUIR and DOROTHY HERZOG talking dogs. FLORABELLE taking two of her favorites to the local dog show. EDWARD WOODS' mother being entertained at luncheon at the Embassy. CARMEL MYERS, IRMA WARNER and MRS. RUFUS LE MAIRE getting together over the luncheon table. L. B. MAYER entertaining with a stag farewell in honor of C. B. DE MILLE. MARTIN QUIGLEY making elaborate plans for his daily. All of Hollywood interested in his paper. That's all today.

HAPPY DAYS HERE AGAIN

Lunar Trip at Fine Arts

Leading astronomers, engineers, physicists, geologists, as well as mathematicians connected with Harvard, Radcliffe, Wellesley, Tech, Boston University, Boston College and Simmons have been invited today to view the first astronomical film made in story form, "By Rocket to the Moon," which opens at the Fine Arts Theater.

This film was made in the UFA studios in Germany and directed by Fritz Lang, who supervised "Metropolis," in collaboration with Prof. Hermann Oberth, famous rocket experimenter. The thrills experienced by Profs. Piccard and Kipfer on their successful balloon trip last week are magnified in this film.

Boston Youth Is Headliner

A Boston boy, Billy DeWolfe, who was an usher five years ago, comes back to his home town next week to headline the seven-act stage show at the Scollay. Since leaving Boston Billy has been featured in "Artists and Models," and with the Marx Brothers in "The Cocoanuts."

Also of headline caliber on this new vaudeville bill are the veteran comedians, Cole and Snyder, in a special comedy skit entitled "The Director." Other acts include Smith, Strong and Lee in "Hi-Elmer," a special skit written by Charles LeRoy; the three Yoki Japs, called Japan's Premier Trick Artists; Hall and Packer, in a comedy specialty, "It Gets a Guy Sore"; Thelma D'Onzo, Sister Cally and Company.

Mirth Just Bubbles Up and Over

When a person spends her evenings making the great American public laugh, what does she do in between times? That is the question that many people have asked about Edna Hibbard, appearing at the Wilbur in "High Hat."

It is easy to answer that question, for making people feel good is not an acquired art of the stage to Miss Hibbard. It is second nature, an avocation—or what you will. It is as easy for this young comedienne to think of smart things to say as it is for other people to breathe. She seldom laughs herself but keeps people around her laughing constantly at her dry wit.

Miss Hibbard plays bridge, rides horseback, takes her dog for walks, swims, goes to the races and cooks—whenever given the chance. She likes sport clothes, berets, yachting, spaghetti, and she never wears furs, summer or winter. On the street she looks like a little girl on her way home from high school.

She has spent much of her life in New York, California and London. She can dance, sing, ride a surf board and talk about anything, from ships to sealing wax. She hasn't an ounce of temperament in her nature—at least not the kind of hysterical temperament that is so often associated with actresses. If making people laugh is work, it must be the kind of work Miss Hibbard likes for on or off the stage—she makes them laugh—and likes it.

Peeping the Way to Get Laughter

Edmund Lowe, one of the stars of "Women of All Nations," now in its second week at the Olympia and Uptown, declares there is one story about himself that has never gotten into print. And he tells it this way:

"It was at the Alcazar Theater in Frisco, and I was making my stage debut.

"My character was a 'gamekeeper.' My business was to hide in a clump of bushes and eavesdrop on my employer and another man's wife. I had one line to speak and I made up my mind that I was going to speak my one line with such fervor that the audience and critics would think of nobody in the cast but me.

"Long before I was supposed to be on the stage I had parted the bushes and was leering out at the audience. They tittered.

"Bert Lytell had no idea why his deadly serious scene with Evelyn Vaughn was so amusing. At last he was supposed to turn to me and say, 'How did you happen to be here?'

"The audience roared. I had been there for half an hour. Then came my opportunity—my line. I postured, waved my arms, made faces and then roared the line out and stalked grandly to the wings."

"Sky Raiders" Tops the Program at the Park

OLD SCHOOL HAS WOODEN FIRE ESCAPE

It is still doing business at the same stand. What interests the parents of the 160 young children who attend this public school is that the building is equipped with a wooden fire escape.

That might have been all right 14 years after the war of 1812, when the school was erected, but the Boston American and the parents of the children ranging from 5 to 8 years of age attending, believe it is about time this obsolete building was abandoned or properly equipped with modern iron fire escapes.

"OLD GIBSON SCHOOL"

This school, known officially as the Dorchester Avenue School, was formerly the Dorchester high school and is called by many the old Gibson school because of its proximity to Gibson st.

It is two stories high and has two class rooms on the first floor and two on the second. The entire building, including the inner stairways, are of wood.

Two of the classes in the building are first grade, one is second grade and one is third grade.

ANOTHER OLD SCHOOL

Another antiquated public school in Dorchester is the Harris school at the junction of Train, Mill and Center sts. This building is a three-story structure, erected 70 years ago. Although it has iron fire escapes the building is constructed of wood and has wooden stairways.

There are nine class rooms containing 360 children in grades one to four inclusive.

Although both of these Dorchester schools may be regarded as structurally sound the Boston American believes it is in the public interest that they be abandoned and replaced by modern, fire resisting structures, in which the danger to children, will be reduced to a minimum. The parents of the 520 precious children attending have the same opinion.

Outdoor Concerts at Newton Playground

A "Pop Concert" will be presented Tuesday and Wednesday evenings in the amphitheater at the Newton Center playground, under the auspices of the Civic Arts Association.

The program will include solo and group dancing by Miss Margaret Huntley and the pupils of Miss Kathryn Pope, and musical numbers by the Newton Symphony Orchestra and the Highland Glee Club.

THE WELL DRESSED WOMAN

Hatred has a silken sheen,
Bitterness a purple fold.
Yesterday I wore them both,
And was warm against the cold.

But I've nothing fit to wear
Now another day's begun.
Hatred ravels out, it seems;

SIGHTS AND SOUNDS

Adolphe Menjou piles up a record of one sort or another in his next picture, "The Great Lover." . . . During the action of the picture he makes ardent love to nine (count 'em!) ladies but the greater part of his osculatory efforts are directed to Irene Dunne, Baclanova and Lillian Bond . . . And the heartbreaking part of it all is that he gets dough for doing it . . . You probably didn't know it before but Marion Davies is a direct descendant of Sir Francis Drake . . . She also has noble French blood in her veins for she can trace her ancestry back to the Duras family, from which she derived her name.

It was always a fairly open secret that F. Scott FitzGerald patterned the character of "Meyer Wolfsheim" in his novel, "The Great Gatsby," after Arnold Rothstein, and I was surprised at the time of Rothstein's murder to notice that not a single news story of his death made any mention of this fact . . . Norman Douglas, who wrote "South Wind," is a runner-up on Noel Coward in the number and quality of his accomplishments . . . Among other things, Douglas is a master of English prose, one of the finest classical scholars in Europe, a great linguist (he can even speak and write Russian), a pianist, composer, caricaturist, botanist and landscape gardner—all to the highest degree of accomplishment.

What sort of a kick can Georgie MacMillan get out of photographing show girls and then mooning over the snapshots by his solitary? . . . And what local newsie is practically an authority on racial derivations? . . . The gallant fire laddies will probably never find a more encouraging audience than they had Wednesday when they quenched a small blaze in the Herald-Trav. stereo. dept . . . And why does Harold (Post) O'Connor entertain the idea that Adam's last name was O'Connor?

DAILY TRUE STORY

THE GIRL WHO DARED

"DON'T MOVE!" SAID ANN. "I CAN SHOOT."

ANN CLAMBERED over the side of her own little sailboat in the tiny harbor of Bluewater and into the pit of Carl's sizable speedboat. So Carl was happy. Happy—for last night, when he had proposed to her, Ann had simply melted into the darkness of the beach and fled without answering, leaving him stranded and rather hopeless on the sand that was just a suggestion of white in the glow of the stars.

Ann, typical of the age and generation that despises relaxation, had been unable to use her little craft because of the calm. So her welcome to the swift speedboat of Carl.

"Greetings!" she cried. "And thanks a lot, sailorman. Let's go see places and do something. I can't bear it in this dead place. Let's go out and far out, Carl. Who knows, we might have adventure—might get somewhere."

"'Fraid it'll be pretty choppy way out," said Carl, hesitantly. "And queer craft have been seen off here within a day."

"So—'fraid to take a chance," pouted Ann, who was afraid of—nothing, a good sport and good at nearly every sport, even on the rifle range, as Capt. Jennison, one of her admirers, had found when he took her up on a rather boastful challenge and was outnumbered in bullseyes.

Carl bit his lip. "Not afraid for myself, Ann," he said defensively.

"Then don't be for me," commanded Ann a bit sharply. "Whatever we meet we'll hail. And I'm so bored, Carl, I really don't care what it is."

The fates must have heard Ann and chuckled.

Out and out sped Carl's boat, now battering and jumping the choppy swells, for the sea now and then became rather lively. "This is glorious," exulted Ann. She took a deep breath and gazed joyfully over the broad expanse of water.

"Think we better turn back?" asked Carl. "Keep going, skipper," was Ann's command.

Ann was the first to see the big sailing boat, apparently swinging at anchor. She insisted upon keeping their course to bring them near to it. Her curiosity was aroused. At length they came close enough to see a tall, husky man standing at the rail. He had something in one hand and was waving it. "Why, he seems to be calling for help," said Ann. "The wind has gone down again. Maybe someone is ill aboard, or something."

Carl brought the speedboat up close to the side of the vessel and hove to.

"We need your help," said the man over the side. Two others joined him. And suddenly Carl and Ann looked up into the muzzles of three guns. Another of the crew threw a boathook attached to a rope and it caught in the speedboat.

"Hold her there," said Gunner No. 1, who seemed to be in command. Then, leaning over and leering at Carl, he said:

"If you know what's good for you, you'll obey orders. I'm gonna put some stuff in your skiff that's gotta be delivered ashore right away. You're gonna lend me your boat an' do jest what I tell yuh. A coupla trips'll finish the job. Then maybe I'll let yuh go."

Carl stood up and angry words rushed to his lips, but the sight of guns silenced him. Ann said nothing, seemed to cower in the stern of the speedboat, hugging her bare knees in her arms.

Only Two Trips

Redney Seemed Sure

The others joined the gibing laugh that followed. "Naw, she stays in the boat, now," said the leader. "Maybe we'll bring her aboard and do the honors—later."

Carl kept his temper. Ann just sat watching, apparently frightened into silence, which was quite unlike her.

The speedboat was halfway across the bay, nosing toward shore. Carl was running the motor, under protest. The craft was carrying several heavy cases. Redney was gazing shoreward, while Ann sat opposite him, an arm's reach away, watching every move.

"I think we'll be able to do it in two trips," said Redney. "We got a truck waitin' in Pine Tree cove. An' don't think yuh can squeal, bo," he warned Carl, "for you're in it as deep as any of us now—a reg'ler rum-runner." Redney laughed harshly. As neither Carl nor Ann had made the slightest hostile move, he had slipped his gun into the loose side pocket of his coat.

"Gee, I'm dyin' for a smoke," he said half to himself. He produced a pack of cigarettes, hunched himself over and struck a match, cupping it in his hands to get a light.

Like a flash Ann was at his side, her hand darted into his pocket and came out with the gun. When Redney straightened up, it was staring him in the face.

"Sit down—and keep quiet," said Ann to him in a voice that meant business. Redney puffed savagely on the cigarette, glaring at her. Then he emitted a bellowing, defiant laugh. "Drop that gun before I grab you an' break you in two!" he commanded.

"Don't move," was Ann's reply. "It will be dangerous. I can shoot—straight."

Redney did make a hostile move, the gun cracked and the cigarette shot out of his mouth into the sea. "Now, be quiet," said Ann warningly. Redney sank back in his place, muttering.

"Carl, turn her south southwest; make for Bluewater," said Ann. "We're going to our own port. And step on it."

Speeds Engine

Making for Bluewater

Carl grinned and sped up the engine.

"You'll be nabbed for bootleggers," warned Redney savagely.

Redney kept muttering maledictions. Twice he made as though to suddenly throw himself over the side, but Ann brought him up with a round turn.

Redney wanted to fall upon Carl and Ann and throttle them as Ann walked him ahead of her along the beach and into the quarters of the coast guard, where Milt Strong, whom she knew, was in charge of the outfit. But Redney had seen her shoot and he feared that gun.

"Got something for you, Lieutenant Strong," said Ann as she marched her prisoner through the door. "And we've got something else for you, down at the pier in Carl's boat. About 12 cases, I think. You see, this gentleman kidnaped us and tried to make bootleggers' out of us. If you'll take a trip out to his ark, off here, you'll find that the cargo isn't fish."

Strong grinned. "Miss Ann Bishop," he said, "you're a wonder. What'll you be doing next?"

"Something or other," said Ann with a smile.

Strong turned the prisoner over to an assistant and he was locked up.

"I want to congratulate you both," continued Strong. "We've been trying to get this Redney for a long time, but we could never get the goods on him."

As they were making their way back to the beach, Carl broke his silence.

"Well," he asked, "as Strong remarked, 'What are you going to do next, Ann?'"

She turned to him with a quizzical smile. "You're—you really are a good scout, Carl. The way you went through with it today, not trying any silly heroics, or anything, made a hit with little Ann."

The praise made Carl glow.

"So," she went on. "Ann is—is going to answer a question you asked last night."

"And the answer is yes," she said softly.

HENIGAN AND DE MAR IN 10-MILE MARATHON

Meet Today in Feature Event of Dorchester's 301st Anniversary

A 10-mile road race under the auspices of the All-Dorchester Post, A. L., with Clarence De Mar and Jimmy Henigan as starters, featured the celebration of Dorchester's 301st anniversary today.

Other Dorchester Day features include band concerts, athletic events and baseball games, to be held at playgrounds throughout the district.

More than 4000 children gathered at Ronan Park, Ward 15, which was the center of exercises of the day. Under the direction of City Councillor Francis E. Kelly, assisted by Representatives Marcus Levins and Lewis R. Sullivan, athletic events for boys and girls were staged and silver cups awarded the winners.

LAST TRIBUTE PAID MURDOCK

With many prominent in public life in attendance, funeral services for Daniel W. R. Murdock, Everett banker and treasurer of the State Democratic committee, were held this morning at the Immaculate Conception Church.

Official announcement that Murdock's death was caused by a fall in a New York restaurant, with the theory of foul play eliminated, preceded the last rites by only a few hours.

The Everett City Hall was closed and flags on public buildings were at half staff during the funeral and interment in Holy Cross Cemetery, Malden.

Celebrant of the solemn high requiem mass was Rev. Thomas J. McCormack, pastor; Rev. George F. Weisman, deacon, and Rev. Vincent J. Hickey, sub-deacon. A large number of priests from neighboring parishes were inside the sanctuary.

SCHOOLHOUSES CONDEMNED

Four former residences being used by Rindge Technical School in Cambridge as classrooms are unsafe, hazardous and are being used in violation of the law, State Building Inspector Ambrose W. Iselle told District Attorney Warren L. Bishop of Middlesex County in a letter made public today.

The buildings, three of which are located on Cambridge, and the fourth on Broadway, house 1058 students. District Attorney Bishop said he had written to Mayor Russell, asking for a full report, and said he probably would do nothing inasmuch as it was a state and city matter.

Supt. of Schools Michael E. FitzGerald, when questioned, said Iselle's action was a "mystery" to him.

"Inspector Iselle told me three months ago we could use the buildings until the end of school session, but something would have to be done then," FitzGerald said.

RIFLE PRIZE TO GLOUCESTER

The William Randolph Hearst Shield for proficiency in marksmanship was awarded to the Gloucester high school rifle team at the school's 46th annual field day at Stage Fort Park.

James W. Reardon, associate editor of the Boston Sunday Advertiser, made the presentation in behalf of William Randolph Hearst and the Hearst newspapers to Maj.-Gen. Fox Conner commandant of the First Corps Area. Gen. Conner, in presenting the shield to Principal Wilfred H. Ringer of the high school, extolled the Hearst award as a powerful incentive to the development of superior marksmanship in R. O. T. C. rifle teams.

Gen. Conner also conferred medals awarded by Mr. Hearst on the five members of the victorious team.

Members of the rifle team are: Capt. Herman Herrick, team captain; Lieut. Waldmar Martin, Sergt. Stewart Lane, Sergt. Wilfred Ringer, Jr., and Corp. Christopher Vrachos.

The entire ceremony was supervised by Lieut.-Col. A. T. Dalton, in charge of the R. O. T. C. unit at the school, and Lieut.-Col. Louis C. Brinton, U. S. A., commandant of R. O. T. C. units in the First Corps Area.

Sunny skies and even temperature, which promises to continue until some time tomorrow caused an exodus of thousands of persons bent on spending their week-end in the country or at the seashore.

Fair weather tonight and tomorrow, with moderate, variable winds, becoming southerly tomorrow, was the forecast. Increasing cloudiness is expected some time tomorrow, followed by showers.

ANIMAL RESCUE MEN SAVE CREATURE

Marooned on a Slippery Spot After Leaping From Tree to Escape Crowd

Two Animal Rescue League employes today rescued an unidentified raccoon from the pointed, slate-topped roof of Hemenway Gymnasium at Harvard.

The animal was first noticed by Traffic Officer John J. Rogan of Harvard sq., who saw it sitting in a tree in Harvard Yard.

Disturbed by many passersby, who quickly assembled, the raccoon leaped several feet from the tree to the roof.

Sensing the animal's danger on the slippery roof, at the point of which it rested contentedly, one of the Yard officers called the Animal Rescue League, who immediately dispatched Al Morris and "Salty" Levine to the scene.

The men hoisted a ladder to an adjoining roof and fearlessly crawled along until they reached the spot under which the raccoon sat. Lowering a rope, they lassoed it about the neck and drew it up to safety.

The owner of the animal has not been located.

District Plan Favored

Chairman Maurice R. Flynn of the Democratic City committee of Malden has asked Governor Ely not to veto the redistricting measure passed by the Legislature. He declares that to veto it would result in greater Republican gains.

FIVE AND TEN

By Fannie Hurst

(Copyright, 1929, by Fannie Hurst.)

(This famous story has been made into a talking picture by Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer with Marion Davies in the leading role.)

JENNY FELT as if suddenly she had walked out of some foul lethal garden into gray but open day. Rarick was in the day, precisely as if she had been off in some long, embroidered faint, from which she had just emerged to find him precisely where he had left him.

A little grayer, a little graver, without eagerness, certainly without gayety, and, consistently as ever, remote from her. And yet so substantially there; for which, and without shame, she showed her gratefulness.

She woke him up one night, as she thought, out of a sound sleep, when her growing panic of the operation was heavy upon her.

"Rarick," she said, softly, filled, there in the dead hours of the night, with a lonely fear that if she did not speak she would cry out.

He stirred lightly as he lay motionless in his insomnia, not quite sure that she had spoken.

"Rarick, could you wake up for a moment?"

"Yes. What it is, Jenny?"

"I am all right. I want to talk, though."

She thought, a little bitterly, that she need not trouble to reassure him, who had no anxiety for her.

He was relieved that it had come. He had been lying there, pitying her in her sleep. A week had passed; and since she had not spoken, he had resolved to see Noon again the following day. But now it had come . . .

A Nuisance

"I've been meaning to tell you something of a nuisance, Rarick. You never asked about what they found at the hospital—so there seemed no hurry."

"I knew if there had been anything serious . . ."

"There isn't. But I'm in for an operation."

He tried to lift his words carefully into the casual.

"That is a nuisance," he said after a pause, "I thought perhaps there might be a little ulcerous condition there."

"That is exactly what it is."

"It is wise to operate, then, and clear up the difficulty once and for all."

She could not help but reach out her hand and touch his lightly at the surge of relief that flowed over her at his calm, inferential way of regarding her recovery.

"I think so, too, Rarick."

"We had better have it over at once, then, Jenny."

We! Nothing he could have said would so have snatched away her terrifying sense of aloneness. She found herself wanting to reach out and touch his hand lightly again, and refrained.

MANY MERGER RUMORS ARE REVIVED

By FRANK H. MELOON

Partly as a result of the better action of the stock market and partly because of the government's decision not to pursue its so-called "friendly suit" opposition to the Socony-Vacuum merger, Wall and State Sts. are witnessing revival of many merger rumors. Although the majority of these rumors concern the public utilities, we do not expect any early rush to effect utility and power combinations.

* * *

The market must be considerably more progressed in convalescence than it is right now to make most likely mergers profitable when new financing is involved. Consummation of the Tidewater-Prairie-Sinclair deal may, however, be sought before long, and then details made public regarding the proposed union of the Standards of New Jersey and California, despite denials.

Ivar Kreuger, the Swedish "match king," one of Europe's wealthiest men, is in this country on a business trip. Mr. Kreuger's securities were first introduced in America through an old-time Boston investment banking house. Kreuger & Toll is very largely held here. The word Toll, by the way, is not pronounced as most use it, but rhymes with doll.

Several months ago a young Harvard student selected the involved structure of the Swedish Match Co., which mines iron, among other activities, as well as makes matches, as the subject for a long bit of analytical writing. His work was so good it was copied by bankers and distributed to stockholders.

Two Fitchburg mills, representing part of the excess plant supply in the textile industry, have been sold to be used in manufacturing luggage. Another mill has been converted into a plant for the manufacture of macoroni. Idle plants in New England are not nearly as numerous as they were a few months ago.

* * *

One group of Boston capitalists has bought rather recently several plants which their owners thought could not be made to pay. All have been made to pay. This is in line with what has been repeatedly stated in this column about the importance of management

There are stockholders in railroads and stockholders in automotive companies. The latter will doubtless feel the Interstate Commerce Commission is exceeding its proper authority in advising that communities which desire to retain their railroad service must support their railroad and not give their traffic to trucks. Inasmuch as the salaries and expenses of the I. C. C. are partially paid by the automotive interests as well as by the railroads, it does not appear that the I. C. C. ought to be supporting one class at the expense of another.

Dispatch comes to us from Detroit today, saying:

"The reversal in stock market prices this week was an electrical stimulant to motor sales. Dealers say salesmen began to take a renewed interest, and dead prospects came to life almost the same day the market turned."

* * *

One big New York and Boston investment banking house says today:

"The future can scarcely be called gloomy. A business depression arising from the excess vitality of overproduction is merely a readjustment period before greater advance and if the business of the United States is going to be on a 'replacement' basis hereafter, Yankee ingenuity must certainly have degenerated. Hard-headed business men will probably shelve this bright picture as too theoretical, but then visionary optimism does not find ready support; ask Christopher Columbus, Fulton and Henry Ford."

How Bond Holders Fare Is Revealed

Holders of domestic corporate bonds, U. S. Governments and foreign dollar bonds in the six months ended June 30 will have received a total of $3,574,391,493 in bond interest and in payment for calls, maturities and redemptions. Interest amounts to $1,814,603,698, and calls, maturities and redemptions to $2,259,787,795 for the period.

Standard Brands' Business Is Better

Joseph Wilshire, president of Standard Brands, Inc., says the company's business in the second quarter is better than during the March quarter. He added that business is "scraping bottom" and he expects a gradual improvement in conditions.

Rubber Is Dull

New York, June 6—Rubber futures today were dull. September 6.30; December 6.70. New contracts: December 6.85.

Today's News of Live Stocks in Wall Street

Usual week-end realizing led to a general sagging of stock values. brokers generally felt the pivotal leaders were entitled to some reactions after recent spirited upturns. The rails, which had led the week's upswing, were subjected to heaviest profit-taking, but trading was in moderate volume.

Declines Far in Excess of Gains

Declines today were far in excess of grains, although generally moderate. Declining issues numbered 368, against 82 recording advances for the session. Issues closing unchanged numbered 80.

Steel Is Lower, With Tonnage Off

U. S. Steel sagged over 2 points today. Drop of 200,000 to 300,000 tons is expected to be announced next week, when unfilled tonnage figures are given out. This is a seasonal decline and the top figure named would be under the average for the past several years.

Brokers' Opinions Nearly All Bullish

Brokers' opinions as made public in week-end reviews were about 90 per cent bullish on the general market outlook. Profit-taking halted the rally in the market, but was fairly well taken, so that the orderly character of the list sustained the better feeling engendered by the happenings of the last few days.

Short Covering Is Mainstay of Rails

Short covering is the mainstay of the rails. The carriers contemplate early application to the Interstate Commerce Commission for the increase in rates as the only alternative to a lowering of wage rates. In either event, the rails would enjoy immediate benefits, some contend. There is considerable difference of opinion as to the longer-term value of an advance in rates, in view of the keen competition of other transportation facilities.

'Frisco's Financing Indicates Change

Consummation of financing arrangements for the St. Louis-San Francisco, while passed off by the market as relatively unimportant, is an incident of great significance as possibly marking an altered attitude on the part of bankers toward this class of financing.

Bethlehem Is Best Actor in Steels

For several months Bethlehem Steel has been the best acting steel stock. It held steady while United States Steel was suffering a severe decline. One of the explanations is that this stock was harboring a substantial short interest and the attempt to cover prevented any proportionate decline in Bethlehem. The fact that the stock was comparatively firm during weakness elsewhere made Bethlehem one of the attractive targets for the bears. As a result there was more short selling than covering at times and the short position continued to expand.

Good Buying for Solvents Is Seen

On several occasions in the past few weeks there has been talk of good buying in Commercial Solvents, but not until the current week has accumulation come into the stock from important quarters. It is known that this quiet buying was encouraged by one of the leading banking institutions which has been the leader in many constructive moves in the past few months. The low selling price of the stock has made it attractive for outsiders.

Waldorf System Acting Better

Waldorf System has been acting much better than most of the low priced issues. This has been due to the good showing made by the company thus far this year. First quarter earnings were 70 cents a share and it is evident that the current $1.50 a share annual dividend will be covered by a good margin in 1931. The company operates a chain of about 150 restaurants and lunchrooms in 45 cities in New England, New York, Ohio, Pennsylvania and New Jersey.

Columbia Gas Bought on Dips

Interests frequently identified with constructive operations in Columbia Gas & Electric continue to add to their holdings on dips. This is due largely to belief that operations of the company during the second half of the year will make a more satisfactory comparison with the same period a year ago.

Price Movements in Bonds Are Mixed

New York, June 6—Price movements in bonds today were highly irregular, although the turnover in most instances was limited to a few or even single sales. Industrial loans showed an upward trend from the start. Public Utility obligations were equally quiet but the price changes were extremely narrow and irregularly lower.

Investment Trust Seeking Listing

Independence Shares Corp., depositor of the fixed investment trust, Independence Trust Shares, has filed an application with the New York Stock Exchange for determination by that body that the trust meets the requirements for the distribution by member firms, according to an announcement by Charles Conrad, vice-president of the corporation.

Listed Values Are Off $5,936,002,806

New York, June 6 (AP)—The market value of all shares listed on the New York Stock Exchange declined $5,936,002,806 in May to a total of $42,533,985,679 as of June 1.

MERGER TERMS ARE UNCHANGED

New York, June 6—Reports that a change was contemplated in the proposed merger terms between Standard Oil Co. of New York and Vacuum Oil Co. are unfounded, information from offices of Standard of New York said.

The plan provides for formation of a new company, General Petroleum Corp., stock of which would be exchanged for Standard of New York on a share for share basis, while one share of Vacuum would be exchanged for three shares of General Petroleum. Morning papers erroneously reported that the Vaccuum share exchange would be one of General for three of Vacuum.

Cash Register Now Running at Profit

After a poor start in first quarter National Cash Register Co. again is operating in black. April operations resulted in sufficient net to offset the first-quarter net loss of $373,183, and May is believed to have shown further improvement, although results of the foreign department for May are not yet available. The April improvement came principally from domestic business.

The second and fourth quarters normally are the best but the management had not looked for such improvement this quarter as thus far experienced.

Alaska Juneau Has Larger May Profit

Alaska Juneau Gold Mining Co. estimates May profits after adjustment for interest on current funds and Ebner Mine development charges at $145,400 before depreciation and federal taxes. In May, 1930, the company reported a profit of $88,400. Five months' profit is estimated at $692,650 before depreciation and federal taxes, against $351,750 in like period of 1930.

Legal Investment for Banks in Mass.

Staten Island Edison Co. 3 per cent gold notes of 1932 will become legal for investment by Massachusetts savings banks on June 14, according to announcement from Bank Commissioner Arthur Guy.

AROOSTOOK IN LEADERSHIP OF RAILS

Bangor & Aroostook covered its common dividend requirements more than twice during the 12 months ended April, 1931, undoubtedly leading all other dividend-paying carriers in this respect.

The road also is doing materially better than class 1 railroads as a whole, gross revenues for the first four months being only 11.6 per cent below that of a year ago, and the net operating income 17.3 per cent less, compared with a decline for all carriers in the same period of 18.8 per cent in gross and 38.6 per cent in net operating income.

The showing by Bangor so far this year is more impressive when it is recalled that the road reported record earnings in 1930, while other carriers are now making comparisons with the low level of earnings prevalent last year. Further, gross revenues and net for the period and for April are better than those for any corresponding period prior to 1930.

Bangor & Aroostook earned $9.26 a share on its outstanding 141,792 common shares in 1930 and $7.66 a share for the 12 months ended with April. In addition to reported earnings, B. & A. had undivided equity in wholly-owned subsidiaries equivalent to 38 cents a share last year. A dividend of $3.50 per annum is being paid on the common.

In 1929 Bangor earned $8.46 a common share, including $1.03 a share non-recurring back mail pay; $6.94 in 1928 and $8.41 in 1927, figured on stock outstanding at end of each year.

The management has met the 11.6 per cent decline in revenue for the four months with a reduction in transportation costs of 14.3 per cent, such expenditures representing only 21.7 per cent of gross against 22.6 per cent last year.

Reports Pure Oil in Better Position

Columbus, O., June 6—At annual meeting of Pure Oil Co., Pres. Dawes said despite the deplorable condition of the oil industry Pure Oil Co. is now in relatively better position due to improvements the past year. Integration of facilities was completed in 1930, and the company now handles all phases of marketing, resulting in savings of $3,000,000 to $4,000,000 annually.

To Market Anchor Device for Autos

Evans Products Co. will begin production about Aug. 1 on a new automobile car-loading product known as the "automobile floor-anchoring device," said President Evans. It will be furnished to railroad companies. It is a mechanical substitute for the old method of nailing loading blocks to floors.

Safety Razor Has Profits Maintained

Despite estimates that American Safety Razor Corp. would earn less than $1.75 in the first six months, present prospects are that results for the second quarter will be at least as good as in the first, when net of $202,613 or $1.01 a share was shown. Advertising has improved company's outlook.

Granite City Has Improved Business

Granite City Steel Co. has enjoyed a pick-up in business over the past month. Instead of showing earnings smaller than the first quarter showing of 30 cents a share on 292,347 capital shares, as earlier expected by the management, the current quarter will show an increase. Tinplate is the bright spot of demand at present.

'Phone Companies' Income Is Larger

Operating income of 105 telephone companies in March totaled $24,106,055, an increase over $22,806,572 in the like month last year. The total for the first quarter was $69,202,739, compared with $67,791,035 for the corresponding quarter of 1930.

Bunker Hill Halts Dividend Payments

Bunker Hill & Sullivan Mining Co. declared the usual monthly dividend of 25 cents, payable June 5. President F. W. Bradley announced directors have decided to suspend further dividends until upturn in price of lead increases earnings.

Sears Roebuck Has Pickup in Business

Business of Sears, Roebuck & Co. has shown pickup in past few days, due to seasonal stimulation following mailing of midsummer flyer catalogue. Mail order division, however, is working the same number of hours a week as a year ago.

Pennsylvania's Head Urges Check on Wasteful Competition

By M. S. Rukeyser

New York, June 6—A characteristic of bear markets is the human tendency to exaggerate unfavorable factors, just as in bull markets the public overvalues favorable prospects.

This trait is well illustrated by the current popular attitude toward railroad securities and railroad problems. It is doubtless true that the bargain hunting instincts, which have been sharpened by depression, have quickened the flow of traffic to competitive agencies, such as buses and motor trucks, but the factor of outside competition is no new element which has come into the situation since the panic.

M. S. Rukeyser

Queried as to the degree to which the current adversity of the carriers is ascribable to business depression, rather than to the new competition, the head of one of the great Eastern trunk lines told me:

"You ask whether the railroads are victims of the business depression or whether something more lasting and more fundamental is wrong with the carriers. Of course, the railroads are victims of the present business depression. How could it be otherwise? The railroads do not, except in an indirect sense, create business. On the contrary, they move the business created by others, and when the volume of business generally shows a reduction of 30 per cent or more, that means that the business of the railroads is reduced by the same percentage. In addition to that, however, within recent years new transportation agencies have been developed which compete with the railroads. To just what extent the business of the railroads has been reduced by these new competing agencies no one can definitely say, but I am quite certain that were it not for the business depression the railroads would be showing very satisfactory results regardless of the new competition."

The decision of the Eastern railway executives to petition for higher freight rates will not be confined to this territory. There has been a conference of executives of western roads in Chicago this week on rate matters.

Gen. W. W. Atterbury, president of the Pennsylvania Railroad, in addressing himself to the question of the cause of the railroad slump, pointed out:

"The effect of the business depression upon the railroads has been much the same as upon industry and commerce in general, and when conditions improve in this country and abroad we shall find our railroad traffic and earnings picking up pretty much as we shall find the production of our steel mills, our coal mines and our automobile plants.

"While I feel that we have an abundance of transportation facilities, I also believe that ultimately we will need and profitably use them all. Our real requirements are to introduce order into the present situation, check wasteful competition and duplication of service, and obviate the too rapid creation of additional facilities for furnishing commercial transportation in advance of the country's needs."

Of course, gold mining companies capitalize depression and deflation, for the price of their product is fixed by law, whereas the cost of production declines. With a fixed price for gold and a free market in platinum, the latter precious metal has dropped extraordinarily close to the price of the former. This situation has led the jewelry trade to interest itself in the anecdote about a manufacturer who was sued for using platinum on a job instead of white gold.

Among the 55 companies which bucked the trend in the first quarter and showed higher earnings was Domes Mines, Ltd. Asked to explain his company's accomplishment, Jules S. Bache, broker, who is president of the company, declared:

"The Dome Co. is a gold mining proposition, whose product does not fluctuate in value, and which reaps the benefit of any reduction in every raw material bought. It has no selling expense, and, in fact, in markets such as these, the good gold mining shares have always advanced.

"The increase in profits for the first quarter is due somewhat to the latter item, but principally to the fact that the mill is gradually getting into a position where it will give its best results, as it is practically new."

Coffee Exchange Is Closed on Saturdays

The New York Coffee & Sugar Exchange today inaugurated its summer schedule and was closed for the day. The schedule provides for closing on Saturdays during June, July, August and September.

PROFIT-TAKING SHADES GAINS FOR WEEK

New York, June 6—Profit-taking in the week-end session of the New York Stock Exchange cut into gains achieved for the week as a whole. Sales totaled 800,00 shares.

Prices were off at the opening, but the dullness of trading on this reaction was followed by a steadier tone as the first half hour was passed.

RAILS LEAD DECLINE.

Offerings came in steadily, if slowly, however and the market worked lower during the balance of the two-hour session. Trading seemed governed by technical conditions rather than by any outside influence.

All groups participated in the decline, which was sharpest in the rail stocks. The range was about 1 to 3 points for pivotal issues.

U. S. Steel lost 2⅝ and there were 2 to 3 point declines for American Telephone, North American, Borden, Du Pont, Electric Power & Light, R. H. Macy, Allied Chemical, Consolidated Gas, American Tobacco "B," Frisco, New York Central, Pennsylvania and Illinois Central.

Union Pacific, which climbed rapidly during the recent rally, dropped 6, and Norfolk & Western slumped 13. Auburn Auto's loss was 6, while International Business Machines yielded nearly 8. American Can was down slightly more than a point.

ENTITLED TO REACTION

Brokerage circles felt the market was entitled to a setback after the active rebound and the dullness of the trading on the week-end sag suggested that necessitous liquidation, for the time being at least, had been cleared up.

Encouraging news items were the smaller decline in bank clearings for this week as compared with a year ago and the rise of one point in Youngstown district steel operations for next week. The gain in the latter index of business activity was the first in some time and tended to offset an estimate of a large but less than normal seasonal decline in unfilled orders of the U. S. Steel Corporation at the end of May. The actual figures will be available next Wednesday, but the preliminary guess was a drop of 250,000 to 300,000 tons, or under the average for the past seven years.

The statement by Chancellor Bruening in London regarding Germany's financial position and the imposition of a "crisis tax" by the Reich government caused some uncertainty.

Plans of the railroads to coordinate efforts to obtain higher freight rates, amounting to perhaps 15 per cent in order to provide a 10 per cent rise in revenues, left the market lukewarm, and it was apparent that the news had been discounted marketwise.

STATE STREET SIDELIGHTS

A natural companion to rising prices are the tips to which State St. traders are now listening. A favorite method of those interested in boosting securities is to allege that Boston's reformed bear trader is behind the prospective move. If he were back of the stocks the "Street" hears linked with his name it would be a safe policy to play against him, in the opinion of experienced traders who say it is impossible for one man to follow more than five or six stocks successfully.

* * *

Boston listed Waldorf, which has held in a remarkably narrow range throughout the bear market, has lately been quite buoyant under the stimulus of talk indicating a raise in the dividend rate. With the preferred stock out of the way and common per share earnings for the year estimated at $2.80 it is not unlikely a new rate of $2 will meet with the favorable support of the directors.

* * *

Traders who failed to get on the long side early in the week and waited for reactions have, as a general rule, been left behind. It is the impression of many in the "Street" that the list has not been called on to face concerted selling by both the bears and those willing to take profits on shares bought at prices near the lows. To them it seems most probable such selling will bring about an intermediary setback offering a good opportunity for purchases at the first of the week.

* * *

Most financial commentators have called attention to the excellent way in which both banks and large investors responded to the governments call for funds. All seem to agree that it is a forerunner to a better second grade bond market, if for no other reason than a scarcity of high grade fixed obligations. Many bond houses are of the opinion the railroads will be the first section to reflect this buying and strongly recommend junior carrier bonds.

Potomska Mills to Reduce Capital

Directors of Potomska Mills Corp. have recommended a reduction in capitalization from $1,800,000 to $1,200,000 to be voted on by stockholders at a special meeting June 15. To effect this it is proposed to purchase 4892 shares from stockholders at $65 a share. These, with 1108 shares now in the treasury, will then be cancelled.

Before you buy or sell stocks or bonds, you ought to secure unbiased expert advice. Send your investment inquiries with stamp to Frank H. Meloon, Financial Editor, Boston Evening American, 5 Winthrop Sq., Boston. All replies are made by mail direct.

SHATTUCK CO.

C. D. F. Canton. I have Shattuck held over from the peak of the bull market. Can you tell me how the company has been doing? My State Street broker advises a switch to Curtiss-Wright. Would you approve the change?

Ans. The switch proposed is not approved. Frank G. Shattuck Co.'s downward trend of earnings witnessed during 1930 was continued in the initial 1931 quarter per share results of $0.43 on the common contrasting with $0.58 for the similar months last year. Second quarter results also are expected to fall moderately under those of a year earlier, says Standard Statistics. Moderate gains during the balance of the current year should allow full year 1931 returns to closely approximate the $1.92 a share earned in 1930. Profits in 1929 amounted to $2.61 a share.

Capital stock, of which there are 1,290,000 no par shares outstanding, is junior only to mortgages of $2,335,250 and receives dividends at a regular annual rate of $1 a share. In addition, an extra of $0.50 was paid in January, last, as well as in 1930 and 1929. A stock dividend of 200 per cent also was distributed in 1929.

The company operates a quality restaurant-candy chain of about 45 stores, five of which were opened during 1930. A unit in the Chrysler Building, New York was opened late in April which should augment both sales and earnings this year. It also is reported that plans are under way for further expansion in some of the leading eastern cities.

The organization manufactures a large part of of its own pastry and ice cream. Business is now divided about 60 per cent in the restaurant division and 40 per cent in candy. A sales agreement is maintained with the American News Co., and a campaign to sell candy east of the Ohio River is being conducted through nearly 500 agents.

NOT COVERED

S. W., Winchester—Do you look for any recovery in Electric Auto-Life? I have 25 shares at 75.

Ans. We could not guess future prices for you. The market action of Electric Auto-Lite seems to point to a downward revision in the current $6 dividend rate paid from third quarter of 1929. The yield now is around 15 per cent. In the March quarter earnings were $1.23 a share against dividends of $3 a share for that period. In 1930 net income amounted to $5.32 a share compared with $11.03 in 1929. Dividends in varying amounts have been paid from 1923.

TWO BONDS

Mrs. A. C. Chelsea—I am middle aged, steadily employed, and want to invest $4000 conservatively. This will not use all my cash.

Ans. That is fine. Bonds would fill the bill. Get $2000 each Title Guarantee and Trust 5s and Lawyers Title and Guaranty 5½s. They are guaranteed as to principal and interest. Annual income is $210.

LATEST EARNINGS

G. M. Quincy—What are the latest earnings for Cluett Peabody? I have some of the stock at higher levels.

Ans.—In 1930 earnings applicable to Cluett, Peabody common were $2.53 a share, an increase over $1.71 a share in 1929. From 1925 the stock paid $5 a share annually; current $3 rate from August 1, 1930. A yield of more than 10 per cent raises a question as to maintenance of this rate.

SPECULATIVE STOCK

P. H., Somerville—Bendix Aviation has been suggested to me as a good purchase. What do you think of it?

Ans.—Bendix Aviation is speculative. Profits depend to a large extent on conditions in the automobile industry. Last year net income dropped to 56 cents a share against $3.54 in 1929. Officially, it has been said earnings for the March quarter would cover dividends of 25 cents a share. January 2, 1931, the annual dividend rate was reduced to $1 a share, compared with $2 paid from July 1929.

WANTS FORECAST

G. E. Boston—What shall I do with 25 shares National Cash Register "A" bought at 32? Do you think it will come back?

Ans.—We do not know future market prices. National Cash Register "A" no longer pays dividends, though the recent $3 rate had been paid on the present stock from 1926. Earnings last year amounted only to $3.01 a share, compared with $7.01 in 1929. Operations for the first quarter of this year resulted in a net loss of $373,000. The stock is a speculation.

Bear Market Is Run Sam Period as Earlier Ones

By W. S. COUSINS

New York, June 6. Vigorous rebounds in the stock market are to be expected after a sustained downward movement such as has been taking place in recent weeks.

When the bulls are away the bears will play has always been the rule of the greatest give-and-take process in economic history. It is easy to explain the factors which cause these rallies after the move has taken place, but not so easy to name the exact time or place at which the buying rush will strike the market.

Contemplation of stock market movements over the past year and a half would be much more pleasant for numerous bulls if they had received more of the "breaks" of the game. In many sections of the market the bears had the greatest panic of their lives and they have naturally seized the opportunity to prick the wild bubble blown up by the inflation of 1929.

* * *

It was the general complaint of the little bulls two years ago that their stocks refused to move with the market and consequently the so-called blue chips went farthest off the sensible price track. This is perhaps one of the principal reasons for the exasperatingly long swing of the bear market.

It has taken a long time for the overrated pets of the 1929 speculative mania to reach the price levels consistent with earning capacities, and everybody knows that a bear market has an unfavorable effect on business.

* * *

Measured by the calendar, the bear market has extended over a period of 22 months, exactly paralleling similar movements in the past. Since each major bear market is damaging in its effect upon an entirely new class of group of speculators, the general impression is to consider the current reaction as the worst ever.

* * *

In the actual shrinkage of market valuations the figures are stupendous, and perhaps unmatched in a former break. But it must be remembered that comparisons are being made with peak prices of an era of unreasoning and unreasonable ballooning of values with little or no regard for underlying conditions.

* * *

Manipulation played a good part in the sky-flying adventures of these stocks, their sponsors in the market not even attempting to justify their selling prices by present or prospective earnings of the corporations behind them.

It is therefore somewhat misleading to say that "values" of all stocks listed on the big board have shrunk 45 billion dollars since September 3, 1929. No great volume of stocks could have been sold at the highest price quoted in the stock sheets. In many cases only a hundred or at most a thousand shares changed hands at the peak. When the selling deluge poured in prices dropped swiftly, and in a shorter time than it takes to tell it, hundreds of millions of dollars were marked off the valuation of listed stocks.

Mutual Life Co. Elects New Trustees

Simmons Co. Total Sales Below 1930

Simmons Company, excluding subsidiaries, reports May sales totaled $2,457,353, as compared with $3,354,071 in May, 1930, or a decrease of 26.7 per cent. Sales for the five months aggregated $10,488,385, as against $14,232,885, or 26.3 per cent below the corresponding period of last year.

Canadian Pacific Gross Income Lower

Canadian Pacific Railway reports gross income in May totaled $12,084,000, as against $15,017,000 in May a year ago.

Gross income for the five months aggregated $56,051,000 as against $69,213,000 in the corresponding period of last year.

NEW BUILDING IS PLANNED

The following is a list of some of the larger projects now being figured which have not been previously mentioned, according to Brown's Letters, Inc., construction reports who have plans and specifications on file in their office.

Associated Electric Production Higher

Associated Gas & Electric System reports electric output for the week ended May 30 was 55,253,531 k.w.h., an increase of 7.3 per cent over the corresponding week of 1930.

Excluding sales to other utilities, electric output was 1½ per cent above the same period of last year, which is the first such increase since May 2 and the second since February 21 this year.

Gas sendout, due to warm weather in the latter part of May, was off 5 per cent during the week ended May 30.

Boeing Airplane Co. Gets Navy Contract

Boeing Airplane Co., of Seattle, a subsidiary of United Aircraft & Transport Corp., has received an order from the navy for 30 Wasp-powered fighting planes valued at $494,415.

Along with a recent order for 135 Wasp-powered pursuit planes for the army, the company's factory has a 1931 military production program of 165 complete airplanes plus spare parts. The two government contracts have a total value of $2,035,761.

Youngstown Scrap Market Steadier

Mahoning Valley iron and steel scrap prices were unchanged for the week after steadily declining for several weeks to the lowest point in years.

Steel production in the district is apparently stabilizing near the 30 per cent level, although scrap purchases by mills are lacking in some classifications.

TRAFFIC LIGHTS FOR WOMEN— THE "CONQUERING" EYE!

By HELEN ROWLAND

MARRYING A fascinating playboy is like buying an umbrella for all your women friends to borrow.

* * *

When a wise girl meets an attractive man with that "conquering" look in his eyes, the traffic lights, for her, should immediately switch to red.

* * *

The modern girl has a way of wearing a lot of clothes, all of them hanging OFF of her—like that Florida moss, which clings to everything, but covers nothing.

* * *

Love in a cottage was a very feasible thing, beside trying to keep the "tender passion" TENDER in a modern glove-fitting apartment, with only a dinette to quarrel in, an electric grill for a kitchen, and not even a front porch to sit on, when you want to get away from each other.

* * *

Mary McCormic declares that she would rather marry fifty Europeans than one American. Well, who wouldn't? Out of fifty—whether it's melons or husbands—you are nearly always sure to find ONE good one.

* * *

* * *

The only difference that prohibition seems to have made is that, in the old days, when a man got drunk, he was ashamed of it—and now he brags about it.

* * *

A sudden glimpse of a long-forgotten sweetheart may sometimes thrill a man; but a sudden glimpse of the girl before the last has the same depressing effect on him as the sight of mid-Victorian furniture.

* * *

A girl has to have a lot of intelligence, before she knows enough to act like a dumb-bell and learns how to talk (to a man) like a moron.

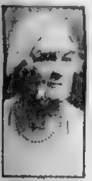
Americans Can Forget So Easily!

By WINIFRED BLACK

THE BELLE of New York—did you ever see her?

And if you did—do you remember her?

Ask me. I do.



Winifred Black

And what did she care?

Not a snap of her delicate little finger—Edna May—that was her name wasn't it? That's how they called her on the programs, anyhow.

It seems to me she was the daughter of a postman, somewhere up in New York State, and they used to tell about her in the theaters—how she came to New York in a simple little frock made by the village dressmaker, "back home" and a hat she trimmed herself.

They asked $5 for a trimmed hat in the shops, in those days, and $5 was a great deal of money.

She didn't have to worry about $5 hats very long, pretty little Edna May, with the eyes of a dove, and the smile of an angel.

Do you remember how she used to sing, and she in her Salvation Army dress and poke bonnet

"They always forget to follow the Light, and always follow me."

Well, what do you think? They're playing the Belle of New York over in London right now and the other night what did Edna May do but slip into a box at the theater and see the show.

And what do you think happened when somebody knew her by sight and the story was whispered from one seat to another

The whole theater went wild, women clapped their hands till they split their gloves, and the men yelled bravo, bravissimo—till you would have thought a conquering hero was marching down the aisle.

What did Edna May do?

Why she cried—of course.

What does any woman do when she is either very, very sad, or very, very happy? And I believe Edna May was sad, and very happy, too, the other night, all at the same time.

Who wouldn't be happy to be so remembered after 33 years, and who wouldn't be sad—just a little to remember how gay she was and how pretty and how young—33 long years ago?

What would happen if The Belle of New York should appear in the theaters of New York or Chicago, or Boston or San Francisco some pleasant evening in the merry month of May or the brisk month of October, for that matter?

I wonder why it is that we Americans know how to forget so easily?

By FAITH BALDWIN

"WHERE HAS Mary Lou gone?" Mathews was asking. "She mustn't be allowed to go like this—vanish, like a changeling."

That's what she was, thought Lorrimer, a changeling.

"Perhaps," Margaret said, "she has gone to Oakdale. I will try and get in touch with her. I'll telephone. No, she mustn't be allowed to go like this."

"Yes. No. I was. Terribly. She'd promised me—silence. And she didn't keep that promise. But I see a little more clearly now. She did what she thought was right. It wasn't her fault if her plan went astray. And I suppose she had to follow her star, if what she thought right conflicted with her loyalty to me."

"There's a virtue in that," remarked Mathews, "for she cares for you, I believe, very deeply. Only a really courageous person would be willing to risk the anger and misunderstanding of someone she cares for in order to preserve her moral integrity." He wanted to add, "and not only risk the anger of a beloved but her entire happiness as well."

It hadn't even been just a risk with Mary Lou, but a certainty. Yes. She had courage. And Lorrimer, too. For Lorrimer also, however mistakenly it appeared to the older, wiser man, was following his own star.

Margaret went upstairs and into Mary Lou's room and sat there for a long time looking at the evidences of her departure. Looking at the clothes, hung in the closet, each in its fragrant enclosure of chintz; at the shoes in their built-in places, and the bureau, covered with all her small belongings, the things Margaret had given her.

The gorgeous fur coat was in its place. She recalled telling Mary Lou it was time to send it to storage; the sable scarf was there; and on the bureau the wrist watch Margaret had given her. On Margaret's own finger, put there in abstraction and forgotten, was Lorrimer's sapphire ring, blue and clear and deep as Mary Lou's own eyes.

She'd taken nothing but a few of the things, long since discarded, she'd brought with her originally, the dress on her back, a hat and light coat, her toilet articles, her nightgown, her slippers and the plainest of her negligées. Her books were there. Only, of her personal belongings, some pictures of her people, kept in a desk drawer, were missing.

Yet everything here belonged to her; had been given her, out of love, out of disinterested affection, not only as part of her "salary" but as her due as a virtual daughter of the house.

Margaret picked up the telephone book and in Mary Lou's sitting room, she called Oakdale. Gram answered, and she was careful not to startle the old lady, merely telling her name and asking if Mary Lou were there. Upon Gram's immediate and excited denial—"Was she coming out?" Gram demanded. Mrs. Lorrimer said only that Mary Lou had gone to town and as she hadn't known her plans and wanted to get in touch with her, she had tried Oakdale first. She remembered, very carefully, to ask for Adelaide and Billy—for she had grown to know them through Mary Lou's vivid description.

She replaced the telephone and went downstairs.

Mathews had been talking to Lorrimer.

"You're set on this?" he had asked.

"Yes."

"It's quixotic, I understand, however. If I didn't I'd call you a damned fool."

"Perhaps I am. But—she needs me, she needs someone. I gave her a promise once; I'll not go back on it."

Mathews said, thoughtfully

"I know. Mary Lou figured that out too, I think."

"I'd rather not talk about her," said Lorrimer briefly.

"That, too? She told me that you'd come to hate her, when you knew," said the doctor, casually.

"I don't hate her," Lorrimer burst out. "I wish to God I did. But she—Oh, it's all so mixed—how much was real?" he demanded, "how much was false?"

"The girl was real," said Mathews, "the situation false. Don't think it didn't give her sleepless nights, the most honest person I've ever had the luck to meet! Every thought, every word she said was honest. She was honest even in the part she played. Try and believe that."

"Perhaps," said Lorrimer slowly, "I'd better not."

Margaret came into the room just then.

Both men turned and looked at her, waiting.

"I telephoned Oakdale," she said, "and she's not there."

Lorrimer rose hastily.

"Would Delight see me now?"

"I think so," his mother answered. "She's finished lunch. I looked in on her just now to see if she was comfortable."

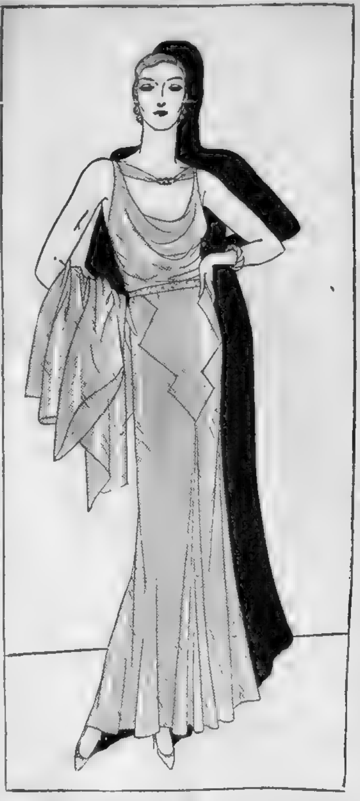
LAME ENSEMBLE BY WORTH

Worn With Hip-Length Coat

SKETCHED IN PARIS



The gold lame ensemble sketched comes from Worth's last collection. The decolletage in front is crossed with two narrow straps which clasp together by means of an exquisite jeweled buckle. Soft draping across the front of the bodice gives a becoming effect. The narrow belt is jeweled in strass and emeralds. A hip-length, wide-sleeved coat of the lame is lined with emerald green satin.

Ivy Poisoning Should Be Treated Promptly

By R. S. COPELAND, M. D.

NOTHING is more annoying or distressing than a siege of poisoning from ivy. Ivy poisoning, sometimes spoken of as "Rhus poisoning," or "Rhus dermatitis," is caused by an irritating resinous substance found in the sap of certain plants.

Dr. Copeland

There are from sixty to seventy plants which produce skin irritations. The most common is the plant belonging to the group known as Rhus. Rhus toxicodendron, or poison ivy, is readily distinguished from other similar plants by its leaves. It has three leaflets, the middle stem being longer than the other two.

It is not necessary in every case to have direct contact with the plant. Many perplexing cases of ivy poisoning are thus explained. Indirect exposure may be sufficient to bring on an attack.

A susceptible person may be poisoned by merely sitting around a campfire in the path of ivy contaminated smoke. The sap of the plant may be carried indirectly by clothing, tools, insects and other objects. In this way it may reach the skin of persons who are quite a distance from the plant.

The sap of the plant causes intense irritation of the skin. Swelling, itching and formation of blisters, at first between the fingers, may be noticed. It spreads and may eventually cover the entire body.

The attack usually lasts about four to six days but may continue longer. The duration depends upon the degree of exposure and the sensitiveness of the skin.

If you are susceptible to poison ivy and have been exposed to the plant, use an alkaline soap. Wash freely in soap water. This precaution may prevent poisoning.

If you cannot obtain this soap use gasoline. This application is often successful. But remember, the treatment whatever it is, must be applied promptly and thoroughly. If delayed, the irritation of the skin will spread.

Shimmering Fabric in the Mode

By PARIS BUREAU

PARIS, June 6—The pot of gold at the end of the sartorial rainbow emerges in the form of gold lame. This lovely, shimmering fabric that has the appearance of molten gold is being used with conspicuous success for some of the season's loveliest ensembles. Ordinarily lame is not really a summer fabric, but as we have velvets and woolens with us during this time of year there is no reason why lame should not be let into the charmed circle of successful summer fabrics.

It is used for frocks destined for gala occasions and festivities, and for this purpose is the ideal choice. Gold lame especially is rich and magnificent and when made with restraint creates an exquisite effect. Restraint in the making and detailing of a gold lame ensemble or frock cannot be too strongly emphasized, otherwise the result will be theatrical and even tawdry. And it should be worn only by a woman blessed with a slim, tall figure and stately carriage.

Very glamorous is the gold lame ensemble sketched during the showing of Worth's latest collection. The decolletage in front is crosed with two narrow straps which clasp together by means of an exquisite jeweled buckle. Soft draping across the front of the bodice gives a becoming effect. The narrow belt is jeweled in strass and emerald colored stones. A hip-length, wide-sleeved coat of the lame is lined with emerald green satin.

Curb Jealousy, Says Miss Fairfax

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX

I will be very thankful for your advice in my case. I have been going with a girl for almost a year and I love her very much. She claims that she loves me, too, but there is another man who likes her. We've started arguments on account of him but she claims that he menas nothing to her although she pays very much attention to him. She gave him a picture of herself and he gave her one of himself.

I would like to know whether I should keep going with her or drop her, because I don't want to be the sap in this affair.

ANXIOUS.

Dear Anxious. You do not say whether you are engaged to the young lady or not. If you're not, she is within her rights in going out with other young men, and you must try to curb your jealousy.

Lovers' Quarrels

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX,

I quarrelled with a boy whom I shall call Jim, about four months ago. I am really the one to blame because I said something very foolish that I really didn't mean. It just slipped out. I have seen him a few times and he has called me up, but every time we speak we quarrel, and it always makes me feel terribly. I know he still cares for me because he almost actually told me so, and I love him. Could you please suggest some way that will bring us together again? SORRY.

Dear Sorry: You know it takes two to make a quarrel. If you positively refuse to be the party of the second part—the fussing is bound to stop.

Shall She Go?

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX

A boy I know asked me if I were going to a play to be given in his home town soon. If I go, do you think it would look as if I were running after him. Shall I invite a girl friend, or my parents, to go with me? I am sixteen, so is he. READER

Dear Reader: Yes, as long as you're going to another town, I think it would be very nice for you to ask one of your parents to go to the play with you. You can never tell what troubles may occur, and it's comfortable to have an older person to fall back on.

SANDWICHES FOR YOUR OUTING

By MARTHA LEE

DID YOU make your first trek into the shady woods or sunny beach for a holiday picnic? Then I'm sure you're planning another for this week-end and are already considering what to carry for "eats."

Martha Lee

Probably you've already invested in a square of gayly flowered oilcloth to spread on the pine needles or sand, weighting it down with rocks or more sand. And have a bountiful supply of the lovely colored paper dishes.

Here are some sandwich suggestions which, with the all-important jug of hot coffee will be a real meal.

CORNED BEEF AND PICKLE SANDWICHES

Chill corned beef over night in the ice box. Cut in thin slices. Place a slice on a slice of buttered bread, cover with a thin coating of chili sauce and then cover generously with lengthwise slices of pickle. Top with another slice of buttered bread.

SARDINE AND BEET SANDWICHES.

Spread bread with softened butter, then with a very thin coating of prepared mustard. Arrange several boned sardines on each slice, cover with thinly sliced pickled beets and top with another slice of buttered bread.

Here's hoping you have a good time!

Faithfully yours,

Martha Lee

VANILLA NUT ICE-BOX COOKIES

- 4 cups flour.
- 3 tsp. baking powder.
- ½ tsp. salt.
- 1 cup shortening.
- 1 cup sifted brown sugar.
- 3 cups granulated sugar.
- 2 eggs, well beaten.
- 1 cup chopped nut meats.
- 1 tbsp. vanilla.

Sift flour once, then measure and add baking powder and salt and sift again. Cream shortening thoroughly, add sugar gradually and cream well. Add eggs, nuts and vanilla. Add flour gradually. Shape in rolls, 1½ inches in diameter. Let stand in ice box until hard enough to slice. Bake in hot oven 425 deg. F., 10 minutes. Makes six dozen cookies. All measures level. Pack in ice cream carton to shape, then tear box away to get out for cutting is a handy way. If rather large cooky, cut in halves or quarters before they are cooked and they make good size and shape.—Mrs. A. C. Roberts (no address given).

ORANGE MARSHMALLOW SAUCE

- ¼ lb. marshmallows
- 1 orange, juice and grated rind
- 2 tsps. lemon juice
- 1 cup heavy cream, whipped.

Cut marshmallows in small pieces and add the fruit juices; let stand for 10 minutes. Fold in the cream that has been beaten stiffly. This is delicious to serve on hot gingerbread or cottage pudding.—Katherine McGovern, 11 North st., Haverhill.

Answer to Requests

MRS. M. S. G. of Shrewsbury advises Mrs. D. W. of Allston regarding fleas on the kitten. "We have always found a tsp. of kerosene in water with which a cat or dog is bathed will kill fleas. You will find them dead on the flesh. Repeat in about 10 days to get nits. Do not use very much kerosene as it will burn the skin, but a tsp. should not do any harm. I prefer this to the flea powders, and we have raised dogs for years. Hope it will help your poor little kitten."

Lay Basis for Your Beauty in Youth

By MISS HUDDLESTON.

A GREATER portion of the fabulous sums of money expended each year for beautifying preparations—particularly rouge—comes from the pocketbooks of women between the ages of 30 and 50.

Josephine Huddleston

The younger woman—that is, younger than 30—merely "dabs" her cheeks with rouge and plies the lipstick with not enough thought to the care of her skin. And thereby hangs a beauty tale.

If the girl and the younger woman would guard health and beauty jealousy, live normally and properly, treat the skin with kindness and care, then, when they had reached the ages of between 30 and 50, it would be found that they would need far less artificial coloring. While the complexion is good and the skin youthful and in good health that is the time to lay the foundation for beauty's future.

By proper living is meant sufficient sleep and normal diet. While I have known women who lived nicely on six hours sleep each night, I don't recommend it. The great number of young business women actually require eight or nine hours sleep to rest the nerves and store up sufficient energy to carry on the next day's work.

Each meal should be balanced so that an over-abundance of any one food or an over-indulgence in the meal does not result.

Water should be taken in sufficient quantity. One tumbler of water for each 15 pounds of weight is the normal amount of drinking water necessary to help nature throw off her store of poisonous secretions.

Drinking sufficient water also helps the joints of the body to run smoothly and goes far in giving the eyes a clear, youthful appearance. The tumbler of water each day for each 15 pounds of weight simply means: take your number of pounds, divide by 15 and you have the number of glasses of water necessary.

Exercise, which means fresh air, sunshine and the exercising or moving of the entire body or its various members, helps keep the contour of the body youthful.

SHEPARD GOLFERS STAR IN RETAIL TRADE PLAY

FANNING

By GEORGE UNDERWOOD

Doc Argues a Bit.
So Does Barrister.
On Fighting Strain.

Celt Can Use Dukes.
And Teut and Frank.

BUT THE YANKEE BRINGS HOME BACON

When it comes to scrapping, the Irishman is a beaut,
So is the Italian, the Briton and the Teut.
France had some great fighters whose names will never fade.
Many world famed boxers were of a dusky shade.
But if you're really looking for the greatest fighting man—
White, or black, or yellow—why it's the American!

WE WANTED to talk about ships and sealing wax and cabbages and kings. The last thing we wanted to talk about was sport. Sport to us, you know, is business. When a feller is feeling sick and out of sorts the last thing he wants to think about is business. But the good doctor, sitting at the bedside along with a lawyer friend, who had dropped in to try to make us forget our bellyache, started talking about boxing in general and fighting strains in particular. Sitting propped up in bed this morning we are going to try, if the pesky keys of the battered old Remington will only stay still long enough for us to hit 'em, to set down their pow-wow about as it drummed in our ears last night. We didn't realize how groggy we really were until we made Ma bring us this punching bag of a writing machine for us to punch out our daily stint. If we're a bit off in timing and distance and miss a few wallops and swings blame it on our tummyache.

"The real fighting strain?" queried the doctor of no one in particular. "'Tis the Irish. Since old Adam first taught Cain and Abel to put up their dukes in the Garden of Eden, the Irish have been noted for their fistic prowess. John L. Sullivan, the Twin Sullivans, Spike Sullivan, Dave Sullivan and all the other Sullivans, Jim Corbett, the two Dempseys—the Nonpareil and the Man Killer—Maher, McGovern, Tom Sharkey, McAuliffe, McFarland, Jimmy Barry, Cal Delaney, the two Gibbons, Britton, Mellody, O'Brien, Mickey Walker, Jimmy McLarnin, champions all, and great champions. When it comes to fighting ability the 'O's' and the 'Macs' always have been in the ascendency. The prize ring never has been without an Irish champion, generally several of 'em. Match the Irish if you can!"

"I believe the real fighting strain is that of cannibal kings," interpolated the lawyer, always cynical in rebuttal. "Even the Irish, Doctor, never developed greater fighters than Sam Langford, Joe Walcott, Jack Johnson, George Dixon, Harry Wills, Jack Blackburn, Peter Jackson, Joe Jeanette and Joe Gans. As great an array of fighters came from stock whose forbears roamed the African jungle as ever descended from Irish kings.

A REAL FIGHTING STRAIN!

WE PUT IN our own oar at this juncture to remind the doctor that the Negro even was a greater fighting man than the records show, for almost invariably the cards are stacked against him. It is harder for the Negro to get fights, harder for him to come to the top. The Negro that makes his bread and butter out of the fistic game often has to agree to go under wraps in order to get matches. Promoters, matchmakers, managers always are ringing in cold decks on the dusky skinned fighting man.

"Yes, the Negro has developed some great fighting men," acknowledged Old Saw Bones." There also have been some great Jewish ones. The strain of the warrior David has produced the great Mendoza, Choynski, Attell, Lewis, Leonard. The Jew ranks among the greatest ring men of all. So does the Italian. The blood of Caesar's legions flowed in some of our greatest ring men, Johnny Dundee, Sammy Mandell, Casper Leon, Pete Herman, Tony Canzoneri among them."

"Just now the Italian comes pretty near ruling the fistic roost," remarked the barrister. "Four of seven present champions, Frankie Genaro, Fidel Labarba, Bat Battalino and Tony Canzoneri, are spaghetti benders. Only one present-day champion, Mickey Walker, is Irish. The other two fistic thrones are held by a Negro and a Teuton. Looks as if the Italian bossed the Cauliflower Patch today.

"They tell me Paul Pironne, the Italian scrapper from Cleveland, who meets Lou Brouillard in the Boston Garden next Tuesday," went on the lawyer, "can deliver the right brand of fistic goods. I was talking with Eddie Mack the other day, and Eddie tells me that Pironne had Young Corbett on the floor three times and also dumped Jackie Fields on his sitdown twice. He says Pironne beat Gorilla Jones, Tommy Freeman and Bucky Lawless. Pironne is quick to follow up and has the killer's instinct. Brouillard wants to keep his chin out of the path of that Italian boy's swings or the French Canadians will have to be buying flowers next Wednesday morning.

A CHIN HED LOVE TO TOUCH

"Lou Brouillard, himself," countered the doctor, "comes of a great fighting stock. The French Canadians have boasted such fighters as Tommy Burns, Kid Lavigne, Tommy Ryan, Johnny Coulon and Jack Delaney. Old France gave us Charlie Ledoux and Georges Carpentier. And the Basques, from which came Paolino, are just as much French as they are Spanish.

"The Basques are a distinctive race," corrected the lawyer. "They are the Irish of the Pyrenees. A great race and a misunderstood one. Voltaire once described them as 'a little people who jump and dance on the top of the Pyrenees.' The present day popular impression of the Basque is as silly as Voltaire's. It was the Basques who halted the Moslem invasion of Europe. In their mountain fastness the Basques repelled Roman, Goth, Vandals, Franks and Moors. England, France and Spain at odd times tried to subjugate them but in vain. How could any race or nation fail to be brave who had a Queen like Jeanne d'Albret, Queen of Navarre?

WE REMARKED that a whole flock of great fighters have come from German, English, Welsh, Scotch, Slavic, Danish, even Filipino origin. We said there was one greater strain than the Irish, Italian and Negro.

"It's the American," we explained, "a combination and admixture of all fighting strains. The Yankee race is the offshoot of the most daring spirits of all bloods, whose forbears dared cut loose home shackles and come miles across the ocean to find new homes in a land of liberty and promise. As John O'Keefe once put it:

'The Yankee grade is the best brand made,
Is the mould of the God of Men.'"

CRICKETERS IN ACTION TODAY

With a full seven game schedule on the program the Massachusetts State Cricket League gets underway today and big crowds are expected at the opening features.

Another good tilt is that between Everett and the Bermudas eleven at Glendale Park, Everett. Mystic Lodge and the Wanderers will cross wickets at the Linden crease in what should be an even battle.

The University will have the West India B eleven at home on the North Brighton crease and as the "Bee's" are the weak aggregation of the circuit the former should have no trouble in winning.

South Shore fans will witness an interesting match when Rockland and St. Georges clash at Rockland this afternoon. Another first class tilt in the same district has the Windsors at Brockton.

N. E. Court Team Has Edge Over New York

Rye, N. Y., June 6 (AP)—The New England and New York teams were matched in the final round of competition today for the Sears tennis cup.

New England, defending champion, was favored to win, although both finalists scored easy victories yesterday.

New England's only defeat was charged to Sarah Palfrey, who unexpectedly went down before the excellent play of the Wilmington, Del., veteran, Mrs. Marion Zinderstein Jessup, 6—0, 6—4.

Garden Mat Show to Be Staged June 15

Ray Fabiani announces that his next wrestling show at the Boston Garden will be staged on June 15. It is likely that Jim Londos, Greek heavyweight, will have Tiny Roebuck, Indian heavyweight, as an opponent in the final bout, which will be one fall to a finish.

Hodson Asked to Play on Ryder Team

London, June 6 (AP)—Bert Hodson, of Chigwell, former Welsh golf champion, today was invited to join the Ryder Cup team, completing the list of eight players and two alternates which will meet Capt. Walter Hagen's United States squad of professionals at Columbus, O., June 26 and 27.

Chief Moore Hurls No-Hit Night Game

Joe Malcewicz, Cantowine in Arena Mat Go

Panther Joe Malcewicz, with 23 straight victories to his credit in matches on the coast, will arrive in Boston on Monday to finish training for his finish bout, best two falls out of three, with Howard Cantowine, the "Iowa Thunderbolt," at the Arena next Thursday night.

Malcewicz has not shown here for over a year. He has been doing all of his wrestling on the Pacific coast where he has been tipping over all opposition.

Panther Joe is best remembered as the "Masked Marvel," who made Joe Stecher run out of the ring at the Arena at a time when he was champion.

Stecher agreed to meet a "Masked Marvel" to be named by Paul Bowser. But when Joe found that Bowser had picked Malcewicz he took it on the run.

The semifinal, a 45 minute match, will bring together Bonnie Muir of Scotland and Al Morelli, Boston College star. Muir tossed Pat McKay, Irish champion, at the Arena the other night and looks as if he has a wrestling future.

AMERICAN OPEN ARMOUR'S GOAL

London, June 6 (AP)—Tommy Armour, British open golf champion, left London today for Southampton and the United States hoping to win the United States open for a double.

"It's great to be the British champion," Tommy said. "It has been my greatest ambition to win the old cup, and now I have succeeded I am going after the American open. What a double, eh?"

Armour said he thought the United States Ryder Cup team was much stronger than the British side.

"You ought to have more youngsters on your team," he said, "for even if they lost this time they would undoubtedly form a nucleus for a much stronger side next year."

Cohasset Horse Show to Be Held in August

After establishing itself as one of the largest and most successful of the New England local shows, the Cohasset Horse Show has joined the American Association and has become a recognized show.

Thursday, Friday and Saturday, August 20, 21 and 22, are the days of the show this year.

The preliminary program has 63 classes, including 11 classes for hackney harness horses, 11 for hackney harness ponies, 15 for saddle horses, 5 for saddle ponies and 18 for hunters and jumpers.

Worcester, June 6—The biggest game of the intercollegiate diamond season in this part of the country is staged here today when Harvard and Holy Cross, the ancient and honorable diamond rivals, clash at Ebbets field.

For the first time in many seasons, the visiting team from Cambridge rules a slight favorite. Holy Cross lost to Providence, while Harvard romped over Rhode Island State in their dress rehearsal games this week.

Red MacHale, Harvard's best pitcher, goes to the slab for the Crimson. His mound opponent will be the veteran Norman Sims of Holy Cross.

Both Harvard and Holy Cross have heavy hitting aggregations. For the past three years, Sims has held successive Harvard teams in subjection.

New York, June 6 (US)—If the Madison Square Garden Corporation intends to block next week's Brooklyn fight between Primo Carnera and Pat Redmond, it will take more than a letter.

Attorneys for the Garden served notice on all concerned today that they would regard the bout as a violation of Carnera's contract with the Garden. The warning failed to register. J. J. Johnston said:

Cobb Not in Market; Just Taking Vacation

Oklahoma City, June 6 (AP)—Ty Cobb, retired baseball star, here today for a visit with friends, denied reports that he was considering buying the Western League franchise of the Oklahoma City Club.

"I am not negotiating to take over any baseball club at this time," Cobb said. "While I still wish to be identified with baseball, although not as an active player, at this time I am just taking a vacation."

Shepard Golfers Win Retail Trade Prizes

By BILL GRIMES

In the future the 12th annual Retail Trade Board golf tournament, which was played at the Unicorn Country Club, will be referred to as "Shepard's Day," for the representatives of The Shepard Stores not only won their first leg on the Frost Cup but also carried five individual prizes.

Three records were established for Retail Trade Board tournaments. There were 20 stores represented in the golf competition and six four-men teams battled for the Frost cup, emblematic of store championship. The Shepard Stores team broke the record set up by C. F. Hovey last year at Kernwood by 12 strokes with a net total of 290.

The team which The Shepard Stores fielded for the Frost cup was hot, for its individual average was 72.5. At the conclusion of the rounds The Shepard Stores had an 11-stroke lead over Wm. Filene's Sons & Co., while C. F. Hovey, last year's winner, was third with 322; R. H. White, fourth; Jordan Marsh Co., fifth, and Gilchrist, sixth.

Charles Kochian was the outstanding star of the Shepard team, for he snapped around Unicorn in 96 blows, which gave him a net 68, but John Shepard, 3d, H. M. Uline and B. M. Black, all did their little bit to bring the championship to The Shepard Stores.

Jack McCarthy Wins Low Gross Prize

In the words of John Shepard, 3d, who presented the prizes after the annual dinner, "our annual winner" Jack McCarthy, Filene's, won the low gross with an even [illegible]

McCarthy shot one of his best rounds from the tees to the greens, but he was unable to acquire the necessary putting touch to bring his low down in the 70's, where it should have been. He missed at least seven putts of less than three feet, and these slips ran his score up to a pair of 46's.

To return to the big winners, The Shepard Stores, B. M. Black had the lowest reduced score in Class A. He grossed an 87 and his 11 handicap gave him a net 76. H. M. Uline was too fast for the boys in Class B for his 19 handicap gave him a 72, while even John Shepard, 3d, admitted that Charlie Kochian should have been round shoulder carrying 28 handicap while shooting a gross 96.

W. F. Madden was the runner up to Kochian in Class C, with 100—30—70 and the special prize, a very much alive and squealing pig, was awarded to J. J. Goodman for his 71-78—149, which was the highest gross score of the day.

P. F. Carver, Slattery's, was the runner-up to Jack McCarthy with a 40-45—85, while Arthur Reid, who is "only three away from seventy" received the third net in Class A and A. V. Carlson, Hovey's, just got under the wire in Class B as did D. S. Bernstein, R. H. White's, in Class C. Bill French, Jordan's, took home, or at least started home, with another pig for turning in a 24 for two holes.

Wm. Filene's Sons & Co. eked out two other prizes besides Jack McCarthy's, for Jack Egan winning the second net in Class A and H. D. Hodgkinson, despite his recently acquired tonnage, turned in a 22-72—94, which gave him second net in Class B.

John Shepard, Jr., former president of the Retail Trade Board, and the present mayor of Palm Beach, Fla., played nine holes and scored well. He is particularly active for a man of his age.

One of the real upsets of the tournament was the 101 shot by Bob Mitton, Jordan's, who is one of the leading golfers in this section. Bob was unable to do anything right, especially on his outward round, during which he used up 53 blows, starting 7—8—7.

A. Lincoln Filene played the entire 18 holes and turned in a 111. He was out in 53 but came back in 49, which was strokes better than the majority of the field.

J. J. McCarthy, Slattery's, who won the high gross score prize last year, picked up as he felt that he was on his way to better his Kernwood round.

Jack Elliott, the radio buyer at Shepard's, was presented with the pig which J. J. Goodman won for the highest score, on his promise that he would be a faithful father to "Porky."

Arthur Reid, Wright & Ditson, is a fine golfer for a man of his years. He is 67 and can and does shoot in the 80's. He has two sons who are professional golfers, so there is a good reason for his proficiency on the links.

Yesterday was the first time that most of the Retail Trade Board saw the Unicorn Country Club under favorable conditions. Two years ago the course was inundated during their tournament.

B. G. Hawkins, Jordan's, was so busy acting as master of ceremonies that he had only time to play two holes, during which he scored for Bill French. French should have been accompanied by a C. P. A. as he needed 22 strokes to play the first and second holes, after which "Bunny" called quits.

BROWNS OPEN SERIES WITH SOX AT FENWAY

MELILLO STAR OF ST. LOUIS BALL CLUB

By JOE CASHMAN

How much time should a big league prospect be given to make the grade?

Not more than two years in most cases and never more than three, in the opinion of most managers.

Yet, if this verdict were accepted by the Red Sox and the Browns, who open a four game series at the Fens this afternoon each outfit would be minus its current outstanding star.

With Webby's career you are, no doubt, well acquainted. How he was tossed around for several years and turned down by the Giants, Cubs, Reds and Senators before landing with the Sox and becoming a sensation has been printed hundreds of times.

This young Italian didn't show a thing for five full seasons in fast company, but, for some reason or other, the Browns hung on to him, and here he is today second among the American League's hitters with a mark of .399, one point less than Mickey Cochrane, the leader.

High Cost Won Players Long Trial

It was probably a price tag, the same thing that saved Ed Brandt, another notable exception to this two or three year rule, that earned Melillo such a long trial.

The Browns paid $50,000 or more to secure him from Milwaukee back in 1926 and when ever they thought of letting him go, which must have been frequently, they probably remembered that fifty grand and changed their minds.

At any rate, stick he did and now he couldn't be bought for $100,000.

The reason for the Brownie's remarkable reversal from a hitter with a lifetime average of .255 previous to this season to the second best batter in the league, we don't know. And we bet that he doesn't himself. It is just one of those things that sometimes happen in baseball.

True, it is being ascribed to spinach, but we know plenty of players who couldn't hit .200 though they ate a carload of greens daily.

Heart Trouble Was Cured

He was found suffering from heart and intestinal trouble shortly after he joined the Browns and until this season was rarely able to play more than half the games of any campaign.

A physician put him on a spinach diet last winter and this spring he reported in fine physical shape and as strong as an ox.

So spinach is entitled to some credit for Oscar's rise to fame even though players hit with their arms, eyes and head and not with their heart and intestines.

It's natural for a manager to become disgusted with a player who doesn't make good in at least three years, but Melillo, Webb and a few others prove that it is sometimes profitable to wait twice as long for a prospect to "arrive."

Collins Finds Winning Combination

After many shifts, Manager Collins of the Red Sox finally hit upon a winning combination in the final game against the Indians and is now very hopeful of passing the Browns, who are only 1½ ahead of the natives, in the coming engagement.

Exeter Favored Over Andover Nine

What the Stars Did

By the Associated Press.

Jim Collins, Cardinals—Fourth hit of game drove in Watkins in 10th with run that beat Giants.

CAULIFLOWER STOCK GOING UP AGAIN

CELTICS FACE PAWTUCKET

Transferring the Glasgow Celtics-Pawtucket Rangers soccer game from Pawtucket to the Providence Cycledrome this afternoon helps to swell the attendance and provides more suitable accommodations for the fans. It will detract from the game itself, the pitch being too small to allow these exponents to do themselves justice.

Only two-thirds of the regulation size of a soccer pitch, the playing space at the Cycledrome is a big handicap especially to a team like the Scottish eleven which is used to playing on large grounds.

Played at the Cycledrome the match will attract a much larger attendance for the fans can seat themselves comfortably and witness every play. Close to 3000 Boston fans will travel to the Rhode Island city to witness the match.

Norwegian Team, Rangers Battle

Another change has been made on the local program for tomorrow the Norwegian Americans and Boston Rangers Charity cup contest being transferred from North Brighton to Franklin Field.

Otherwise the schedule remains the same, Clan Stewart and Beacon A. C. battling at Sullivan Square in one semifinal of the Curley cup and Clan McGregor and Bird & Son at Quincy in the other.

In the Victoria cup semifinals Lawrence and the General Electric eleven of Lynn battle it out at Lawrence while the Swedish Americans and Quincy Carsons oppose each other at Faxon Field.

Bruce Caldwell Star of Eastern League

New York, June 6 (AP)—Bruce Caldwell, the New Haven slugger, has not added any more honors to his list, but he remains far ahead of all rivals in the Eastern League averages up to last Wednesday.

Caldwell still is first in five respects; in batting with a .467 average, in scoring with 35 runs, in hits with 64, in home runs with 19 and in runs batted in with 56.

His only serious rival is Bobby Reis of Hartford, who is second in every one of these departments and in base stealing as well. Reis has a .416 batting average. He is one of five players who have scored 31 runs and has 57 hits, eight homers and 31 runs batted in to his credit. He has stolen five bases, sharing second place with Hohman of Springfield, one behind Rosenfeld of Hartford.

Bryan of Bridgeport is the only other Eastern League regular who is batting better than .400. He has a .403 mark and leads in hitting doubles with 15. Malay of Bridgeport and Helgeth of Albany have hit five triples apiece.

Other batters who have been at bat 100 times or more and whose averages are high enough to place them among the leaders are Parenti, New Haven, .398; Murray, Richmond, .368; Parham, Hartford, .350; Smith, Norfolk, .338; Roetz, Richmond, .333; Bates, Richmond, .324; and Cohen, Hartford, .324.

With three men on this list of leaders and several others with high averages, the Hartford Senators are at the top of the club batting list with a .299 average. Springfield leads in fielding at .969.

Jim Mooney's place at the top of the pitching list remains unchallenged as he has run his string to seven straight victories. Gallivan and Higgins of Hartford have won four games apiece without losing one.

The listed world's 150-yard backstroke record is 1 minute 56 1-5 seconds, set April 29, 1930, at London by Miss Cooper. Miss Eleanor Holm of New York holds the American record of 1:56 1-5.

35-MILE PACED RACE TONIGHT

Riding against Jimmy will be Al Letournier, Franz Duelberg, Freddie Spencer and Johnny Gallo, the Revere contractor, who is trying to stay up with the big time pace followers.

In tonight's show, Butler will start the junior races, which have been popular. He has arranged a 10-mile motor paced chase for the junior pros, in which Anthony Bernard, Fred Hebb and Al Duffy ride.

Cantab Cubs Face Dorchester Nine

Tomorrow afternoon at Wainwright st., Dorchester, the fast-stepping Cantab Cubs will play the Dorchester Twi League champions, St. Mark's H. N. S. The game starts promptly at 3 o'clock.

The catching will be done by either Martin "Buster" Molloy or John "Tweet" Reardon. In the box will be Ben Anderson or Tony Pacheco.

SLUGGERS IN WIGWAM FRAY ON MONDAY

By JACK CONWAY

Ernie Schaaf's 70 second knockout of Jim Maloney put a kick back into the local boxing situation. There is a craze to see big fellows toss their tremendous punches.

Paul Swiderski, Polish heavyweight who collides with Babe Hunt in a 10-round bout at an Argonne A. A. show at Braves Field on next Monday night, should satisfy some of this desire on the part of the fans to see the big punches fly.

Jack Conway

Swiderski belted Mickey Walker down eight times when they met at Louisville, while he recently won a decision from Hunt after a hectic scrap in Oklahoma City. It was the first time Babe had been outpointed in his home district.

"I never have trouble with big fellows," said Swiderski. "I believe I shall stop Hunt this time."

Hunt has shown in Boston four times. He outscored Jimmy Braddock and Ernie Schaaf, stopped Leo Pantaleo and dropped a decision to Napoleon Jack Dorval.

Anything may happen when George Nichols of Buffalo and Rosy Rosales of Cleveland, a couple of kayo stars, trade socks in another 10.

Paul Pirrone Ends His Training Today

Paul Pirrone, Cleveland welterweight, will end his heavy training today for his ten-round bout with Lou Brouillard of Worcester, which will be staged at the Boston Garden on next Tuesday night.

Pirrone, a youth of 21, has shown to advantage in bouts in the Middle West. He received a draw with Tommy Freeman, while he dropped a decision to Gorilla Jones after a hard fight.

If Pirrone should win from Brouillard, he will find Freeman and Jones camping on his trail. Tommy McGinty, manager of Freeman, wasn't satisfied with the draw decision in the meeting with Pirrone and has been seeking a return bout for his protege.

Suey Welsh maintains Jones has the necessary punch to stop Pirrone.

Meanwhile Pirrone is getting ready for Brouillard. If he wins, he will undoubtedly agree to meet Freeman and Jones.

Brouillard has been made a favorite in the early betting. Lou showed enough fighting form in his recent bout with Al Mello to lead his admirers to believe he can conquer the average run of welterweights without much trouble.

Wrestling Next Week at Revere Track

There will be a wrestling show at the Revere Cycle Track next Tuesday night under the direction of the Massachusetts Wrestling Association. "Tiger" Jack Young, formerly of Boston College, and "Grizzley Bear" Rumley of Vermont will collide.

Nick Lutze will meet Pat McKay in the feature bout, which will consist of one fall.

Sherry Spills Finsky

Diamond Dust

—By JOE CASHMAN—

Babe Ruth knocked out his 10th homer of the season yesterday, and the blow, coming in the ninth with a man on, gave the Yanks an 8-to-7 win over the Browns, who had come from behind and taken a one-run lead by scoring three in the seventh and four in the eighth.

The world's champion Athletics have finally been stopped by a Western entry. After winning 14 games in a row from the teams from the wide open spaces, the Mackmen were set down 7 to 5 by the Chicago White Sox, yesterday, in a 12-inning battle which was settled by a home run by Lou Fonseca.

The leaders didn't lose any ground, though, as the Detroit Tigers broke an eight-game losing streak by beating the second-place Washington Senators, 1 to 0, in an 11-inning pitching duel between George Uhle and Sad Sam Jones.

The most remarkable feature of the Red Sox triumph over the Indians was that it was gained while Umpire Harry Geisel was umpiring behind the plate.

Both Charlie Berry and Bill Sweeney made three hits in four times up and each was robbed of a double on his other trip to the platter, the former by Porter and the latter by Vosmick.

However, this fine hitting and very good pitching by Ed Morris and Wilcy Moore wouldn't have saved the Sox but for Earl Webb, who made a phenomenal one-handed stab of a drive by Earl Averill with one on in the eight. If Webby had failed that smash would have been good for three bases and probably the ball game.

ENGLISH HIGH WINS CITY TITLE

The Timmons brothers, Jim and Bill, playing shortstop and first base for English, proved the nemisis of the Latin team when they combined on two occasions to score.

Both teams scored twice in the initial inning. English chalked up it markers when Callahan singled and then scored on a pair of errors by the Latin infield. Timmons was safe at first on the second of these errors, advanced on an infield out and then scored on Bill Timmons' safe smash.

Boston College plays the University of Hosei championship baseball team at the Heights this afternoon. The Japanese team has been making a tour of the United States for the past two months, meeting the best opposition American colleges throughout the country could offer.

This is the first time the Hosei nine has been the guest of Boston College.

This tour is the annual prize offered to the champions of the Big Six College League of Tokio. To date Hosei has played 18 games in this country, winning a third of the total and scoring victories over such outstanding teams as Pennsylvania, Notre Dame, Navy and Michigan State.

In their last two engagements the Nipponese dropped close decisions to Yale and Fordham. Past games have shown that the Japanese are wonders in the field. But they are weak at bat. The team average of the Hosei nine is just 200.

With this in mind Coach Frank McCrehan of Boston College will select either Buddy Roy or Harry Downes for mound duty. Both Downes and Roy depend upon burning speed to make their stuff good. Either of them should be able to stop the Japanese in their tracks.

Coach Fugita of Hosei, himself a former college star, has named his best hurler, T. Wakabayaski, to face the Eagles. Wakabayaski is also the best hitter on the squad and is often called upon in a pinch. He is one of the most famous athletes in Japan and last year was selected to represent Japan in the Far East Olympics which were held at Tokio.

GOOD GOLF

By CHESTER HORTON
Golf's Greatest Teacher

Golf fundamental No. 3, in the order in which I rate them, would be keeping your swing in true plane.

STAY IN THE TRUE PLANE OF YOUR SWING

This phase I have discussed heretofore and will touch upon it again from time to time. The principle point of breakdown with regard to your swing plane is at the point where, with the club started in your back swing, you cease to go on around with it and, instead, lift it upward. Thus you start back at one angle, and get on to the top at quite a different one. As you start back have in mind to make your left hand reach for the back of your neck, with elbow breaking.

Real Story of the Life of Clara Bow

(In previous installments Louella O. Parsons, film critic, who knows Clara Bow, flaming "It" girl of the films, better than any other person in the world describes the early years and romances of the flaming haired film star. Today Miss Parsons tells of Clara's latest film disaster and her trip to Rex Bell's ranch in the fight to regain her health.)

CHAPTER 17

I regret to say that our own Hollywood is not free from certain papers that use advertising as a weapon. I also regret to say that gossip is frequently printed which is untrue, and spiteful articles are made public. Fortunately, papers of this kind never last long. For the time being people back of such a paper may ingratiate themselves into the confidence of the film people but it never lasts long. I have seen so many of these little sheets come and go.

A wave of sympathy has spread over the film capital of Hollywood for Clara such has never been to any other person. Letters by the thousands have poured into the office of this writer asking if there is not something that can be done to help her.

Clara must come back, the fans declare. She must be given a welcome such as no girl has ever had on the screen. She must be made to feel that all the world realizes that these accusing articles are a mass of lies.

Clara Relieved
Sickness Halts Salary

It is cruel and unjust to sacrifice a girl 25 years old whose life has been one long series of tragedies, simply because an unscrupulous person chooses to tell lies.

I sat in B. P. Schulberg's office while he told me that he had plans for a big story for Clasa Bow. You can imagine my astonishment when I read in the newspapers that Mr. Schulberg had said in a Denver interview that Clara is leaving Paramount. Knowing her as I do I realized that her pride would not let her continue if Mr. Schulberg showed any indifference about her screen career.

Probably Mr. Schulberg felt that he was being kind to Clara in permitting her to leave his company. Certainly Paramount has given her some pretty poor stories during the past year or two. Give Clara a good story and watch her come back.

"I am glad that I can get well," she said, "without worrying about pictures. I know that Paramount has lost money because of my state of mind and health. I don't want to cause them any more inconvenience."

"I knew that I wasn't giving my best to my work," she said. "I hated to give up 'The Secret Call,' but I couldn't sleep. I awakened at night feeling as if I must scream and yell. I kept thinking of those things printed in the Coast Reporter. I called my housekeeper. 'I can't stand it. I wonder if I am losing my mind,' I cried."

Rests on a Ranch
Clara Denies Death Try

She sent for the doctor, who said that Clara must rest, or she would have a severe nervous breakdown from which she might never recover.

Paramount insisted that Clara return and complete her picture. She made one futile attempt and collapsed completely on the set.

B. P. Schulberg still did not realize that she was critically ill. He told me that he thought she had taken a dislike to some one in her picture.

"Clara is a curious child," he told me. "If things are not right on the picture she won't complain. She will just stay at home. She has always hated to cause any unpleasantness. When I heard that she had left an unfinished picture for the second time, I wrote her a sharp letter. I told her that Paramount could not afford to suffer additional financial loss on her pictures, and that we would have to take some action."

She wrote a letter that was so like Clara that it touched my heart. It read:

"Dear Ben: Don't sue me. I have a House at Malibu, property in Beverly, a little money in the bank, and a Rolls Royce, you can have them all. Signed, CLARA."

"I am glad to have my freedom," she told me. "I can now take as long as I want to get well."

When I saw she was making plans to go to the Bell Ranch and get well,

"Rex has a grand mother," she said. She has been such an understanding friend."

Clara has promised those who love her to get well. There will be plenty of film offers when she is well enough to make a picture. Two of the biggest producers in the business are ready to sign her once they are sure she is strong enough to work.

"I realize since that awful day when I read those articles I haven't been well enough to make pictures," she said. "When I come back I want to be entirely well. The words 'Clara Bow exposed' 'Clara Bow exposed' danced before my eyes when I tried to remember my lines. I thought to myself I am better off dead. Then my father and Rex talked to me and told me I must get well that I was only nervous and run down.

"I didn't try to commit suicide," she said. "As a New York newspaper stated. I am not religious but I firmly believe it is wrong to try and take the life that God gave you."

(To be concluded Monday.)

MORE OVERSEAS BITS

Networks Listing Four European Features This Month

This year's sixth month (of which the sixth day dawned this morning) certainly is to be remembered for transatlantic broadcasting. Four more features are announced by NBC to come from Over There. Whenever program men, with their keen eyes, fail to sight something big on these shores, they complacently gaze in the direction of the Old World, sure enough, an event of some sort is sighted.

Though much international radio achievement is already a part of the past, the fact that voices and sounds come across 3000 miles of ocean still affords a thrill from the listeners' angle. In addition to NBC, Columbia will again transmit its regular Sunday afternoon bit tomorrow, after which Rosa Ponselle has a CBS offering for this coming Tuesday, originating at Covent Gardens, England.

Radio finds Covent Gardens only too ready and willing to permit the airing of operatic bits as they take place. Next Thursday (June 11) NBC brings the third act from "Rigolleto" to American ear cuppers. Then on Friday follows a revue "Our Town" to familiarize fans over here with English stage comedy. A chamber music concert is arranged for the 15th inst., while Sir William Beveridge speaks to the U. S. on unemployment remedies. Thus radio moguls complete a full schedule of European features for June.

Big Hearing Set for June 15 . . . .

Hundreds of millions are involved in the hearing that takes place in Washington on Monday, June 15. It is the question concerning re-licensing of RCA units, constituting high powered broadcasting and television transmitters, known to be the greatest radio commercial communications system in the world. Oswald F. Schuette, of the Radio Protective Association, will appear before the Federal Radio Commission. This body will be asked by him to intervene and the big problem looms as to whether RCA and affiliates should be refused renewals of license under the anti-monopoly provisions of the Radio Act.

At 10:45 tonight (WBZ) Governor Stanley C. Wilson of Vermont will be heard for the fourth time on the grandeur of his native State.

* * *

Louise Groody, long a stage favorite and moving rapidly to radio heights, is featured during the RKO half hour period tonight. Other stage personalities including Songwriter Neville Fleeson, are taking part in the program (WBZ) beginning at 11:15 p. m.

What famous magazine folds up its radio tent after Sunday evening (WBZ) depriving listeners of John B. Kennedy until September 13? By this time everybody will realize that it's Collier's—Righto!

No Babies by Radio!. . . .

On Thursday (those who follow this "colyum" will remember) it was reported that Gene Austin would spring a surprise involving homeless babies. Orphans were to be offered for adoption by radio's "Good Scout." Now it develops that WEAF will not air the feature as per schedule. Perhaps it didn't look so well in print—just the same, Frigidity of the Pedal Extremities would seem to be the logical reason for withholding the idea.

Is Joe Cook laughing? Vincent Sorey brings a giant guitar to the radio audience Sunday through WABC. It will be used during the Gauchos program. With 18 strings, the huge instrument makes music equal to four guitars. An honest-to-goodness imitation of the "Four Hawaiians," at last. N. F. T.

FIVE AND TEN
By FANNIE HURST

"Any time you say, Rarick."

"Suppose you let me take the matter in hand. I will arrange with Noon."

"Yes, Rarick." She felt so small, lying there beside him, so in need, so oppressed by sudden awareness of how solitary to be born—how solitary to die!

"I guess I'm a little frightened, Rarick. There is something about the knife—like cutting the rope to a moored boat—"

The very texture of her flesh, it occurred to her, scorchingly, had been softened, since last he had touched it, by a lover's touch. If flesh, except by way of act of lips, could speak . . .

"The inevitable is frightening, Jenny, but chiefly because we usually have to sit on the rear seat and watch some one else at the wheel."

She thought he was going to moralize, and stiffened.

"Let's be honest, Rarick. Ulcers may be another name for—for anything. O God! Rarick, I don't want to have anything terrible happen to me. I've so much to do, Rarick. So much that must be straightened . . ."

The mother of Avery was lying beside him, frightened. The feeling of cronic open wound somewhere around his heart began to move.

"We are going to come through this Jenny."

"We are, aren't we, Rarick? It isn't that I'm afraid to die—"

It was!

". . . it is just that I'm not ready, Rarick. So much to be straightened."

She had paid God. Pew-rent. An occasional Sunday-morning obsequy. Ready-made reverences. He had approached with a new closeness when He had taken Avery. But now—now—

"Rarick, strange that we who have had so few joys together must always share the sorrows—first Avery—now this—"

"Then don't Jenny."

"You must help me through, Rarick."

"Yes, Jenny." How? He wanted to. The mother of Avery must have it in her to rise on spiritual wings out of that fear.

"If I should die, Rarick."

"But why——"

"You can do that for me."

That was what he could do for her.

"Somewhere back, Rarick, when I was a girl in Central high school in St. Louis, I remember we used to read in class, wasn't it Heloise or Annabel Lee or somebody slim and white in a poem, who dreamed of a casket lined in ailanthus leaves out of beaten silver . . ."

He supposed so, but why plan for death when there was life to be thought of? . . .

GET TELEPHONE TIP

Search was made up and down the country-side, but the detectives could get no line on the thief or thieves. The insurance company had about decided to pay the claim, when one day a New York detective received a telephone call. A man whose voice the detective did not recognize, asked if he were interested in the return of the jewelry in question.

The detective immediately expressed interest, and was told to go to Boston and get in touch with a certain person, member of the local ring, whose name and address were furnished.

The information was passed along by the detective to representatives of a jewelers' protective association, and it was decided to act on the tip.

Representatives of the association, together with men from the insurance company, and the detective, journeyed to Boston and registered at a downtown hotel.

The got in touch with the professional man "fronting" for the gang and went to his office. He admitted, when questioned, that he had certain knowledge of stolen jewelry, but had no information as to where it was stolen or by whom. His interest, he said impressively, was only in seeing that it was returned to the rightful owners. Of course it was customary, he pointed out, to pay a reward for the return of jewelry, and he thought matters would be expedited if the insurance company agreed to pay it at once and ask no questions.

PAY $19,000 REWARD

As the stolen jewelry was worth nearly $70,000, the insurance officials were perfectly willing to pay $10,000, the customary reward, for its return. But they learned to their dismay that the man with whom they were dealing was not willing to accept that amount. He insisted that $20,000 was little enough to put out in order to recover $70,000. They dickered and haggled and, finally, compromised on $18,000.

The insurance officials drew sighs of relief and prepared to write out a check for the amount. But there was another shock coming to them. The "front" man declared that he must have $1000 for his efforts in bringing about the return of the jewelry. He got it. And the insurance men and detective returned to New York with the jewelry, convinced that Boston racketeers were tough people to deal with.

Before they left, of course, they counted the stuff in the suitcase to make sure they were getting all that belonged to them. And here is the funny part of it. Instead of 102 pieces, which the bag contained when stolen, there were 106. The "front" man was unable to explain the extra four pieces, and to save further argument suggested that the New Yorkers take them along with the others.

MOB DESERTS THIEF

The thief who "lifted" the jewelry in the first place, no doubt was taken care of, but if he received much he did not keep it long. A short time later he was sent to jail for a minor offense and had no money with which to hire a lawyer. Apparently the mob had ditched him for no one went to his aid.

Another example of how the Boston gang works, was evidenced in the case of $35,000 worth of jewelry stolen from Philip Schuyler, a New York salesman, in a downtown restaurant some time ago. Schuyler, employed by the jewelry firm of Powers & Mayer, Inc., 58 West 40th st., New York City, was eating lunch in the restaurant. His sample case he kept near him while he ate. When he left the table to pay his check, Schuyler picked up the case and placed it on the cashier's counter. Two young men jostled him, one seized the case, and both fled.

There was a chase and the cry of "stop thief" was raised, but the noonday traffic was as heavy as usual and the thieves escaped.

The police went to work on the matter, and later a man who was booked as John P. Keenan of South Boston was arrested for larceny. He was tried and acquitted. The case had contained 300 diamond rings, 100 platinum ring mountings, white gold bracelet wedding rings and 200 gold ring mountings.

DETECTIVE TRICKED

In the meantime the insurance company in New York had been notified and Noel Scaffa, the detective, went to work on the case. A short time after the robbery Scaffa got word that the jewelry would be returned for a reward. He came to Boston and got in touch with certain individuals who made a contact for him with members of the mob. A meeting was arranged, and it was agreed that a reward would be paid for the return of the jewelry.

It was stipulated however, that the reward should be paid before the jewelry was turned over. There was nothing Scaffa could do about it but agree. He did. Imagine his feelings when he received a parcel containing jewelry, only to find that a number of pieces were missing.

I am told the New York detective became enraged, and immediately made representations. The mob laughed at him, and demanded more money for the return of the remainder. He was forced to pay it, and this time got all the stuff.

In addition to jewel robberies, which are their chief source of income, the Boston mob also goes in for bond stealing. Members of the outfit travel all over the country picking up stolen jewelry and also bonds.

PLACED ON SALE

The jewelry is either turned over to insurance companies for rewards or, if it consists of valuable stones, removed from mountings and placed on sale in stores. Much of the stuff picked up in other sections of the country is stones, although there is an incident of a trunkful of jewelry, stolen in Oklahoma City, being returned in Boston.

The stolen bonds, if convertible, also are brought to Boston and put into local banks as collateral in connection with legitimate business enterprises, which the mob run as "fronts."

Sometimes, however, the banks insist on investigating, and the mob then has considerable explaining to do. Only recently this happened when an attempt was made to put through bonds valued at a considerable amount. The bank investigated and found they were stolen from various parts of the country. The man who had them in his possession said he had received them in a jewelry transaction. Police are investigating.

Further revelations will be made by The Masked Reporter Monday.

Advice to Clergymen
The Pacifist Minority

It was high time for someone in authority to voice the contempt of the nation for the sapping expedition against the national defense which a clerical minority of Pacifists are organizing.

This patriotic task has been admirably performed by General Douglas MacArthur, Chief of Staff of the United States Army.

Requested to give his opinion of the repudiation in advance by more than ten thousand clergymen of the constitutional obligation of every American citizen to support this country against the enemy, General MacArthur says:

> "The question of war and peace is one that rests under our form of government in Congress. In exercising this authority, Congress voices the will of the majority whose right to rule is the cornerstone upon which our governmental edifice is built. Under the Constitution its pronouncement upon such a question is final, and is obligatory upon every citizen of the United States. That men who wear the cloth of the church should openly defend repudiation of the laws of the land, with the necessary implication and ramifications rising from such a general attitude toward our statutes, seems almost unbelievable. It will certainly hearten every potential or actual criminal and malefactor who has either broken or contemplates breaking some other law.
>
> "Perhaps the greatest privilege of our country is religious freedom. Religious freedom, however, can exist only so long as government survives. To render our country helpless would invite destruction, not only of our political and economic freedom, but also of our religion.
>
> "I am surprised that men of clear and logical minds confuse defensive warfare with the disease which it alone can cure when all other remedies have failed. Do they not know that police systems and armed national defense are the human agencies made necessary by the deep-seated disease of individual depravity, the menace of personal greed and hatred? Should not these clergymen turn their attention to the individual sinner and rid the country of crime rather than attack the national keepers of the peace, the most potent governmental agency yet devised for this very purpose?"

In every war waged by the American people in defense of the nation, clergymen have volunteered and have rendered patriotic service afield and afloat.

Never has the Congress required them to bear arms, and by the terms of the Geneva Convention ratified by this country in 1907, chaplains were given the status of non-combatants.

Therefore no American clergyman has the slightest excuse for repudiating in advance his constitutional obligation as a citizen to serve his country as the government to which he professes his allegiance directs.

Furthermore no American clergyman can justify his participation in any sapping expedition against the national defense upon the ground that the United States is provoking attack by excessive armaments.

As General MacArthur points out, the existing total of our land forces today is only about one-third of one per centum of our total population.

Although the United States is exceeded in population only by Russia, China and India, at least fifteen other nations have armies from three to forty-five times as great as is the present strength of our Regular Army, National Guard and organized reserves.

Instead of sowing among the rising generation the seeds of disloyalty, all American clergymen should be spreading the gospel that "righteousness alone exalteth a nation," and governing themselves accordingly.

For as Theodore Roosevelt said, "righteousness should breed valor and strength," not cowardice and weakness.

Butler Is Coming
City Will Welcome Fighting General

General Smedley D. Butler will be the honor guest of Bunker Hill Post of the American Legion at the patriotic "night-before" celebration, June 16.

He is a dry. He is a Republican. It is said he speaks out of turn.

Nobody has ever said he is not a brave man.

He should receive a splendid reception. He will. And the people across the river can be expected to do well by his friend and pal, Lieutenant-Colonel James J. Meade, a Charlestown boy, who, like Butler, has many times been up there at the front where the imminence of death brings out the true steel in real men.

You Must Believe

Laura Wright, Alabama Negro woman, had a husband, said to be an atheist. Dying, the atheist said that his wife had killed him. A lower court declined to convict, "because you can't take the word of an atheist for anything." But Alabama's Court of Appeals hands down an opinion saying atheists are "fools," but entitled to civil rights.

The wife must go to jail for twenty years. There is never any objection if you believe in the wrong god, or a dozen wrong gods. If you believe in Allah and his prophet, Mohammed, who rode up to heaven on his white horse Alborak, or in the many gods with many arms of the Hindu religion, no one objects, for then you are not an atheist.

You don't have to believe in the right god, but you must believe in some god. Not believing is the unforgivable sin.

We Have an Autogiro!

In matters of aviation it doesn't take the Government long to make up its mind—when it gets around to it. The Navy Department has just received from it a present of an autogiro. Assistant Secretary Ingalls, of the Navy, has approved the autogiro. He says:

> "I am very much pleased at the way it has performed. It is the greatest development in aviation since the original flight of the Wright brothers."

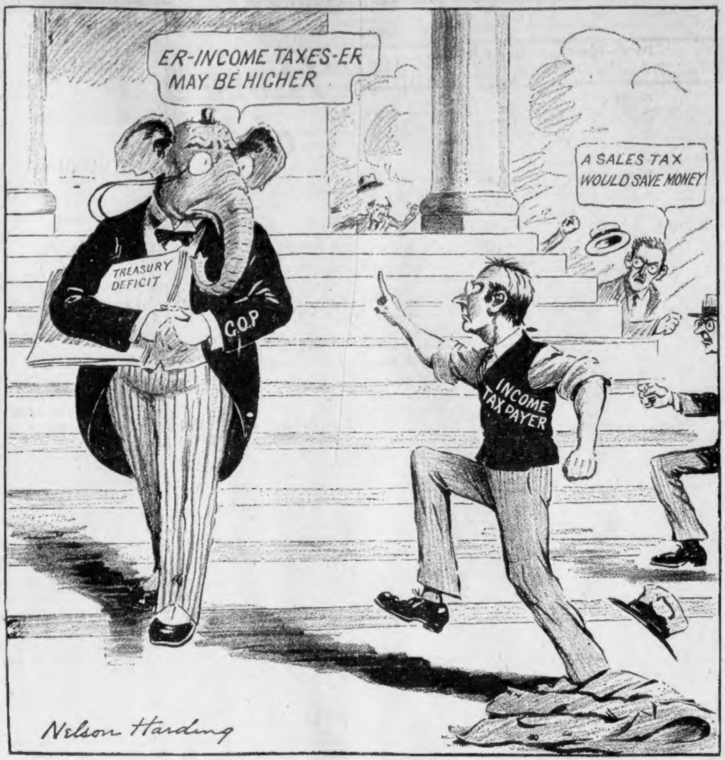
Many foreign governments have believed this for the last nine years and some of them have had scores of these celestial doodlebugs in active service for as long as six years. Our navy is to be congratulated. In 1932, if it doesn't make too much fuss, it may have another autogiro—perhaps.

"Them's Fightin' Words"

By NELSON HARDING



ER-INCOME TAXES-ER MAY BE HIGHER
A SALES TAX WOULD SAVE MONEY
INCOME TAX PAYER
Nelson Harding

The angry man takes off his coat,
For those hard words have got his goat.
The G. O. P.'s ill-timed remark
Has brought to life the fighting spark.

A sales tax would not be so bad,
Nor would it make taxpayers mad;
And surely this is not the time
To say, "The Income Tax may climb!"

STILL, our guess is that if Wall Street, by this upward sag, so to speak, undertakes to prove that it means business, the Bills and Janes of the country will once more quickly desert their fields and gardens for the stock brokers' offices, where the tickers are only waiting for a little irrigation to burst into bloom again.

New York Day by Day
By O. O. McIntyre

Whistling Dance

NEW YORK, June 6—For about ten days I have been shopping around at Broadway tap dance schools. In all I have taken six lessons and almost any week now you may see a bright banner fluttering in front of the Palace announcing a new vaudeville sensation—A Whistle Dancer.

Its not a thought up act but just came natural. A few minutes after I snap into a clog I begin with no effort at all to whistle. The phenomenon results from a combination of what might be called the heaves and a gap in my bridge work. And it's more fun.

This whistle is no low cadenza from Humperdinck or anything like that. You could use it to call off a hunting dog. All I have to do is shake my feet and get out of breath and before you know it I'm tooting like a peanut stand. And, with such a talent, I've been wearing myself out working on newspapers.

I first discovered the gift taking a lesson from Billy Pierce. He demonstrated a buck and wing caper and sat in a chair to watch me.

Determined to master the step I strug'ed hard and all of a sudden burst out in a shrill clear whistle. Billy got up and looked in his chair. He thought he was sitting on something. I stopped dancing but not whistling. As I puffed I would let go a plaintive whoo-ee-ee-ee.

It takes about a minute for me to lie down, somewhat in the manner of a slowly deflating balloon. In a 15 minute vaudeville turn I could easily take six bows and keep whistling all the while. I got so worked up about it that I trotted around to see Ned Weyburn.

I explained that as he was always on the look-out for novelties I had something that would knock his eye out. "Look!" I cried. And I went into my dance. After finishing, he commented: "You have something but I don't know what." But I heard his crack as I was leaving—"That bozo has sprung a leak."

• • •

Genius is often swatted this way. So I didn't mind but rushed home to show the folks. There is where a fellow is appreciated—in your home. Friends were there. I still have a couple. Yanking up a rug in the hall, I called to them to gather about. Again I went into my dance, winding up the castanet-like obligato with the whistle effect. Most of them laughed. My mother-in-law cried and Harry, the colored butler, knelt and prayed. Remember above where I said where a fellow was appreciated—in your home? Change that to read—in your hat.

• • •

Rather than stay to watch more of a genuine novelty they rushed off to the radio to hear a Ray Long speech at some club. They twirled the dial. But no Ray. Not even mi. Or a teeny-weeny sol. "Enjoy yourselves" I Yoricked while dolce far nienting into the bathroom, removing the mats and continuing my foot work. In a closed room that way the taps and whistles are far more pronounced. I worked out a dandy climax. After doing the routine, I wind up in a break, hold my breath and finale with two long shrill wristles. It goes like this—ta, te, ta, ta, peep, peep! Do I seem to be breaking out with anything?

• • •

The Wright brothers tinkering in their bicycle shop and me tapping away in the seclusion of a bathroom symbolize the indifference to which trail blazers are heir. Just a little word of encouragement and I burst into bloom. Little boys at such time have mistaken me for a wild cherry tree and hacked me with hatchets. You'd be surprised how I'm all nicked up. But the disdainful glance or careless shrug and I wither like a bud in a blizzard. My cheeks pale. My steps falter. My eyes dim. And my tongue fuzzes up.

My new career is mottled with uncertainty. But after sitting at a typewriter for 20 years and suddenly discovering perhaps a new way of making a living, one is likely to goang-gang-gwa, said he, laughing girlishly in the Scandinavian. At my age I do not expect to be a Will Mahoney or a Bill Robinson because—the news is bound to get out anyway—I am a bit knee sprung. Yet for an opener while the customers are being seated I believe my whistle dance has certain merit. Bring the kiddies!

Just Folks

Bird-Owner

Several pairs of purple martins
  Occupy a house I own,
Every morning through my window
  Comes a thrush's silver tone.
Bluebirds in a clump of shrubbery
  Quite contented seem to be,
Like the roses in my garden
  All their charm belongs to me.

Quail come calling every morning,
  Round the lawn I watch them race,
Now and then a gaudy pheasant
  Brings his hens to see the place.
I have meadow-larks and kill-deer
  Nesting not so far away
And a dozen feathered songsters
  Sing for me at break of day.

I'll have music all the summer.
  Every bird house is engaged;
I own sparrows, wrens and robins,
  But not one of them is caged.

'Safe' Bribery Is Used Here; It Needs Curbing

By John T. Lambert

A PROFESSIONAL GAMBLER walked into the State income tax offices recently and volunteered to pay taxes on his winnings the past three years. He would resort to any adroit and shady practices when "playing" against competitors in games of wit or chance. But he felt he was not playing straight with the State.

Tax officials say 90 per cent of the people are honest. They frequently reveal hidden sources of income, such as profits on the sale of stock, which an army of government examiners and scouts would be unable to discover.

If people are that honest, they are entitled to get a straight deal from public officials who spend the money.

Theodore N. Waddell, State Director of Accounts, tells this newspaper there are plenty of officials or bagmen "taking their 'commissions' on street contracts, their 'cuts' on the purchase of supplies and their 'percentages' for using their influence in one way or another."

This gentry do not hire a hall or hold a town meeting when corruption is to be practiced. Bribery is difficult to detect. But a law enabling public officials to be ousted for misfeasance or nonfeasance would permit the public to get rid of some of them and would put fear into the hearts of others.

We Move Ahead

We are moving ahead, faster and better than we sometimes realize.

Take the care of our aged and indigent people as an example.

It was not so long ago that Governor Samuel Walker McCall urged old-age pensions in his inaugural address to the Legislature, and he was roundly abused by the Bourbons and reactionaries who regarded him as one of their own and, like them, unable to see beyond the nose on their face.

The old-age pension system now exists in one form or another in seventeen of our States, with a population of 42,000,000. That covers one-third the population of the country.

Critics scold our day. But everything is not jazz, bootleg booze and crime. A generation which shows such fine regard for its aged people cannot be counted an entire loss.

An Adams Letter

It was written at Philadelphia on July 1, 1776, three days before the signing of the Declaration of Independence.

"This morning," he wrote, "is assigned for the greatest debate of all—the declaration that these Colonies are free and independent States, and this day or tomorrow is to determine the fate."

The outlook was not rosy. Smallpox had wrought havoc with the army. On the sea, however, the Colonists had driven the British men-of-war completely out of Boston and had captured a number of transports.

"The conflict must be bloody," he realized, "but the free constitution of civil government cannot be purchased at too dear a rate as there is nothing on this side of New Jerusalem of equal importance to mankind."

His letter could be read with profit today by professional pacifists, by League of Nations addicts and by his great-grandson, who happens to be Secretary of the Navy.

Cowboys and Indians

Our own Cyrus Dallin told a New York audience that the frontier cowboys deserve to be stripped of the heroic glamor given them by the historians. "They were the most brutal band of roughnecks that ever existed."

The early American Indian, on the other hand, was not the bloodthirsty savage he was painted, said the Boston sculptor. "He was a gentleman with dignity and majesty of bearing who practiced self-restraint."

Dallin ought to know something about it. He lived for eighteen years in a log-cabin in the Far West. Anyone who doubts his ability to sculpt the Indian can well afford to spend an half-hour with his original "Appeal to the Great Spirit" in front of the Boston Museum.

But his condemnation of the cowboy seems to be extreme. Virgin lands are never explored and settled by gigolos or drugstore cowboys. They require strong, daring men. In the absence of law, might is bound to be right.

The Indian, in his innocence, put too much faith into written treaties. Men break them, and Nations break them. They both covet territory, room to grow. Then treaties become scraps of paper. Uncle Sam is steadily being put into the position of the Redskin, too much faith in scraps of paper, too little in keeping his powder dry and his arrows plentiful.

Listen, World!
By Elsie Robinson

Don't Stay Sorry!

YOU'VE DONE something wrong?

That's bad.

That's good.

Be sorry. Be so sorry that you'll get the whole thing out of your system . . . not only the wrong act itself, but the weakness that caused the wrong act. Be 100 per cent sorry all through—

AND THEN FORGET IT AND GET BUSY!

Elsie Robinson

Why was that first act wrong? Because it was silly, selfish, cowardly . . . because it was a menace and a waste. But remorse can be as great a menace and a waste.

A REFORMED SINNER CAN MAKE AS GREAT A NUISANCE OF HIMSELF, RECOUNTING AND REPENTING HIS EVIL DEEDS, AS A DOZEN DRUNKS CAN BY LAPPING UP ALCOHOL.

Personally I vote for the drunks every time. For you can enjoy yourself with some drunks, but I never knew a chronic repenter who wasn't an unmitigated blight.

In the first place, he's always an egotist. His pseudo-sorrow is but a thin mask of colossal conceit. He thinks that his particular misdemeanor is the most important happening in current history and he spends all his waking moments contemplating it . . . or trying to make you contemplate it.

He is also lazy and cowardly. He doesn't want to face reality. He doesn't want to assume responsibilities or engage in action. And he finds a perfect escape in Remorse. THE WRONGS OF YESTERDAY OFFER A WONDERFUL ALIBI FOR DODGING THE DUTIES OF TODAY.

And it goes without saying that he's utterly selfish. It's as selfish and anti-social to spend all your time repenting as it is to spend your time killing or stealing. In either case you're not a bit of good to society and you're blocking the path of progress.

If you've done something wrong, be sorry—

BUT DON'T STAY SORRY!

Five minutes of sincere repentance will cleanse your character and put you right with God as surely as fifty years of it. Then, if you're truly sorry, it's up to you to PROVE IT.

You can't pay that debt by tears and prayers and handwritings. These only satisfy your own vanity. If you really want to square your record — MAKE A NEW ONE. MUFFLE YOUR MOANS . . . WIPE THE OLD CHIN . . . AND GET GOING!
